Ickes Renews His Attacks On Garner, Amon Carter

Fort Worth Publisher Will Rush Back To 'Pie Counter' In Fall, He Says

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A combined forecast of President Roosevelt's reelection and attack on Garner-led third-term opposition yesterday was dispatched to a prominent Texas publisher and to all members of the Texas Congressional delegation by Secretary of Interior Ickes.

Ickes, chief third-term-for-Roosevelt exponent, addressed his remarks to Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, a Garner supporter. Mimeographed copies were sent to Texas Congressmen.

Ickes charged that "Defeat Roosevelt" is the principal purpose of the Garner movement.

Replying to an editorial attack by Carter, Ickes said President Roosevelt would be easily reelected in November and that Carter and other such leaders would be the first to rush "to the pie counter."

Replies to Editorial

"After all," Ickes wrote, "the coming election is not to elect a President of Texas, but of the United States, of which I am a citizen."

Carter editorially had charged Ickes with "carpet-bagging" tactics in connection with his recent visit to Texas, where Ickes was widely reported promoting a third term.

The Interior Secretary retorted that neither in his recent Texas speech nor privately on various visits to the State did he talk politics.

Bitterly upbraiding Carter, Ickes declared "the movement, in which you are such a shining light, is not for the nomination of any particular man. It is to defeat Roosevelt."

Wirtz Back in Texas

The letter followed vigorous third-term activity by Texas "draft Roosevelt" leaders, aimed at wresting from Garner the "favorite son" support of his own delegation at the Waco State convention on May 28.

Last week, Alvin J. Wirtz, Assistant Secretary of Interior, told reporters on leaving the White House that he was returning to Texas and while there would "put in some licks" for the third term.

Draft Roosevelt strategy in Texas was reported designed to limit Garner's "favorite son" strength there to the first convention ballot, with the delegation pledged to swing to Roosevelt thereafter.

Prior to Garner's rout by third term forces in the Wisconsin and Illinois primaries, Texas had been regarded as safe for Garner. Alarmed by subsequent third-term activity in the State, at least one highly placed Texan here was said to have sought and obtained assur-

Hit-Run Driver Kills 64-Year-Old Retired Machinist

A hit-run driver, who fatally injured Clarence Pedigo, 64-year-old Spanish-American War veteran, near his home in Seat Pleasant, Md., early yesterday, was being sought last night by Prince Georges County police.

Pedigo was found unconscious on Central avenue at its intersection with Bell Haven avenue. Policeman Edwin Cissel rushed him to Casualty Hospital, where he died.

Police said Pedigo was a machinist who had been retired from the Government service. They said his wife was on a visit to Rhodelia, Ky. Police there have been asked to notify her.

America's Heritage of Dance and Ballad Lore Scores Big Hit With Everyone, From Wide-Eyed Youngsters to Diplomats

Two large audiences that carried total attendance at the seventh annual Folk Festival to more than 17,000 yesterday cheered the music and dancing brought to Constitution Hall by performers representing every section of America.

Members of the Diplomatic Corps at last night's show included Swedish Minister W. Bostrom and Mme. Bostrom, Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope and Mme. Procope and Norwegian Minister Munthe de Morgenstierne and Mme. Morgenstierne.

Among others who had boxes for the performance were Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and Mrs. Jackson, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

Dutch Girls Entertained

Senators Alva B. Adams and Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado, were in the audience and went back stage to greet the Denver cowboy dancers during intermission. The Finnish Minister, who was another distinguished backstage visitor, earlier received the Minnesota Finnish group with Mme. Procope at the legation.

Dutch girls who took part the opening day in the festival delayed their return to Holland, Mich., in order to lunch at the Capitol with Vice President Garner and Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of their native State.

At the afternoon performance, high school pupils were as enthusiastic about the show as their younger brothers and sisters the day before. They distributed their applause among the hundred-odd performers who had come from as far away as Honolulu to take part in the show.

Headliners for Today

Many school children who were unable to attend the student matinees Thursday and yesterday because of capacity crowds will be present at today's matinee.

The Kiowa Indians and Hawaiian group will appear again at both shows today. Other outstanding attractions include Swedish dancers, folk tunes from Maryland and Virginia, Massachusetts and North Carolina square dances, soldiers and sailors songs, German folk dances

Neilson Given Confirmation As Police Judge

Senate Approves Roosevelt Choice On Day Named

The Senate late yesterday confirmed the appointment of George Darrell Neilson for the vacant Police Court judicial post.

Nominated by President Roosevelt earlier in the day, he was confirmed quickly because of a "crowded docket" at the court, it was stated.

Indorsed by the chairmen of both House and Senate District committees, the 33-year-old bachelor yesterday termed himself a "bound on traffic" and "without any sympathy for the flagrant traffic violator."

Judge Neilson, a former newspaperman, is an enthusiastic golfer, swimmer and supporter of local amateur theatrical groups. He came to Washington in 1929 from Logan, Utah, and studied law at George Washington University. He received his law degree in 1933. He previously had attended Utah State College, where he received a bachelor and master degree in science.

Takes Curran's Place

He fills the vacancy made by the resignation of Judge Edward M. Curran, who assumed the post of United States Attorney here April 3. The vacancy existed 23 days. Neilson lives at 3423 Porter street northwest, and will draw $8,000 each year in his new post. The appointment is for six years. There are three other Police Court judges, John P. McMahon, presiding; Walter J. Casey, and Hobart Newman.

While he attended school here, Neilson was the Washington correspondent for three Utah newspapers and later worked with the United States News here. He was admitted to the bar shortly after graduation and was named assistant

Bandit Subdues Ex-Policeman, Takes School Cafeteria's $200

A bandit yesterday got the two-day receipts—$200—of the Deal Junior High School's cafeteria after subduing a 66-year-old former policeman who had started with the funds to the bank.

BINGHAM

The bandit, about 25, whose clothing was brown, from shoes to hat, awaited the volunteer messenger, James Bingham, 109 Quincy street, Chevy Chase, on the rear steps of the school.

At 1:30 p. m., Bingham, who has taken the cafeteria money to the Chevy Chase branch of the Riggs National Bank as an accommodation since his retirement from the Eighth Police Precinct in December, 1938, emerged, carrying the money in the pail.

He placed the pail of money in his automobile, parked between the steps and the playground where about 50 students were at play.

When Bingham turned to enter the car, the bandit was beside him, pressing a .45 caliber pistol in his side. He commanded Bingham to enter the car and drive off with him, but Bingham refused. The bandit took the pail of money from the car.

Thereupon, he commanded Bingham to walk with him toward the open lots. Bingham seized the man farther on, but he broke loose after a scuffle and made his getaway.

Permanent Program

Education of physically handicapped children as a permanent activity of the public schools yesterday was indorsed by Chairman Overton of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations at the conclusion of the third day's hearing of civic spokesmen.

Senator Overton said he was so impressed by the unanimity of requests that the House appropriation be raised from $15,000 to $22,400 and be placed under direction of the Board of Education rather than the welfare department that he had decided to make the change in the District supply bill.

The Washington Post has conducted a two-year campaign for the education of these children, first as a WPA project and later by the schools when the WPA announced it could no longer finance it.

More Relief Asked

Members of the Senate subcommittee indicated the Commissioners would be given full control of the planning and execution of the Scott Circle underpass. Secretary Ickes disclosed he had asked that the Interior Department be permitted to pass upon the design because of the National Capital Parks office control of the park tract in the circle.

One Senator pointed out that the underpass along Sixteenth street will go under rather than through the park tract and that consequently the project is outside Ickes' jurisdiction.

Social welfare workers yesterday appeared before the Senate subcommittee and requested an additional $1,348,000 in unemployment relief in the face of an anticipated revenue deficit. The increase was asked chiefly to care for an estimated 3,000

Nazis Break Through Allies At Roros; Reich to Make 'Political Declaration' Today

Von Ribbentrop Will Deliver Message to Press, Diplomats; Topic Kept Secret

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, April 26.—Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop will deliver personally tomorrow to foreign diplomats and the foreign press a message to which the German government clearly attaches great importance.

In Berlin, where speculation in large measure overshadowed news of fighting in Norway, the following explanation from a usually well-informed source seemed plausible, although it could not be confirmed:

Von Ribbentrop, favored Hitler statesman, will disclose what was found by German invaders in the Oslo foreign office "regarding connivance between Great Britain and Norway for making Norway the northern flank of the Allied war front."

Declaration "Political"

Announcement of the foreign minister's statement said only it would be "a declaration of the Reich's government" pertaining to the "political situation," but the unique gesture of assembling foreign diplomats, military attaches and the press in the Reich's chancellery emphasized the significance with which Germany views the statement. It will be read at 2:30 p. m. (7:30 a. m. E. S. T.) and broadcast by all German radio stations.

"The importance of this declaration follows from its ceremonial setting," said the excellently informed commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland.

"Strictest silence is being observed regarding the subject matter of the declaration, but one will not go wrong in assuming that the moment chosen for delivery of this declaration hints it will be an important contribution toward clarification of the present political situation."

A government spokesman declined to elaborate on the announcement.

The German stand is that the Allies intended to move into Scandinavia, and from there to assault Germany, but that Germany beat

British Withdraw Near Rail Center; English Pursuit Planes Appear at Front With French Foreign Legionnaires

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, April 26.—Long columns of Allied infantry and artillery pushed over slushy, bomb-scarred roads in Norway today into stiffening front lines as the first major battle of the northern campaign loomed near German-held Trondheim.

Military spokesmen frankly admitted "we have lost the first trick" in Norway and a fresh reversal was announced today in "limited withdrawals" before strong German forces south of Dombas, 110 miles southwest of Trondheim.

British bombers continued to harry German air bases in Denmark and Norway and fired gasoline dumps at Vallo, on Oslo Fjord, an air ministry communique said, as well as attacking German ships.

Nazi Planes Claimed

British antiaircraft batteries in Norway and fighting planes were credited with shooting down six German planes and damaging eight others yesterday and last night. Other British air operations, the air ministry said, resulted in destruction of two more German planes and damaging of another while "five of our aircraft are missing."

Swedish advices said a second German column seeking to relieve Trondheim was set back with "considerable losses" by the Allies near Roros, 70 miles southeast of Trondheim.

The Allies—for the first time supported by pursuit planes—poured British infantrymen, veterans of the French Foreign Legion and crack battalions of France's Chasseurs

U. S. Friction With Britain Is Lessening

State Department Issues Summary Of Blockade Talks

By William V. Neusly

A pronounced lessening of friction between the United States and Great Britain over war-prompted restrictions on this country's foreign trade was shown last night in an official summary of conversations under way for several weeks between Allied experts and American officials.

The State Department issued the summary, which was interpreted as giving promise of increased Allied purchases of American products, aside from munitions and war implements. In addition, it indicated a more lenient attitude on the part of the Allies toward permitting this country to obtain from Germany badly needed articles unavailable elsewhere.

More important, it revealed that Britain and France are definitely committed against autarchy and intend to return, as soon as the war permits, to multilateral trade in accord with this country's reciprocal trade program.

The conversations were engaged in by Prof. Charles Rist, economic adviser to the French ministry of blockade, and F. Ashton-Gwatkin, adviser on policy to the British ministry of economic warfare, along with the French and British ambassadors, and high officials of the State and other departments

The allied experts arrived here last March 16 to undertake to smooth out mounting problems and lessen American resentment over increasing interferences with American commerce.

Yugoslavian Coup Blocked, London Says

Allies' Firm Stand Foiled Seizure, Report Indicates

By the United Press

London, April 26.—A firm Anglo-French stand was reported in diplomatic quarters tonight to have dissuaded Premier Mussolini from carrying out contemplated seizure of several Yugoslav islands off the Dalmatian coast to "test out" Allied reaction.

The purported plan, as described in London, was a result of strong pressure by Chancellor Adolf Hitler in an effort to bring Italy into the war now on Germany's side.

For two weeks, these reports said: Hitler has been trying to convince Il Duce of the advisability of Italy entering the war. However, there are influential forces in Italy which are opposed to armed action on Germany's side, including King Victor Emmanuel, the Pope and a number of high military leaders, according to information heard in London.

The reports reaching diplomatic circles here said that Mussolini, after Hitler's urging, contemplated the seizure of several of the Yugoslav Islands and was even prepared to invade Yugoslavia, although probably at some later date.

Against this, it was reported that Turkey is ready to go to the aid of Yugoslavia in event of invasion, and, with Greek cooperation, send three divisions of troops into Italian-held Albania.

These plans on Mussolini's part were being formulated, it was said, when the Italian Ambassador to London, Giuseppe Bastianini, advised Count Ciano that the Allies were prepared to act if Italy committed aggression either in the Balkans or the Eastern Mediterranean.

Foreign Legion in Fight

Stockholm, Sweden, April 26. The German armies in Norway continued their offensives on all fronts today, and though they were reported checked at most points with little or no gains, they did break through at Roros from which they had to retire yesterday and are now rapidly moving northwestward in the direction of Trondheim in an effort to establish contact between their isolated troops there and the main German force near Oslo.

[From Stockholm, the Associated Press reported that a savage, head-on clash between German and British troops was said to be in progress along the narrow Gudbrandsdalen road northwest of Lillehammer in the central Norwegian fighting zone, with the result still in doubt.

[Heavy fighting also was reported at several points 35 miles southwest of Lillehammer where Norwegian forces were reported to be making a stand.

[The United Press reported French Foreign Legion troops had engaged a body of German soldiers in this sector, driving them back with "heavy losses."—Editor's note.]

[The United Press later, under a Saturday date line, reported that a Stockholm newspaper declared that the railway station at Grong, a town half way between Steinkjer and Namsos, on the only rail line linking those two strategically important places, was destroyed yesterday in a German air raid.]

Resembles Warsaw Dash

The dramatic dash from Elverum to the neighborhood of Trondheim within a few days, carried out by a small troop of only about 500 men equipped with six tanks, eight armored cars and 25 motorcycles, recalled in many respects a similar dash which small German tank units made into Warsaw on the tenth day of the Polish campaign—only to meet virtual annihilation there.

But, this time, German, not enemy troops stand at the receiving end ready to welcome them with "heils," and not with gasoline bottles, which burned much of the Warsaw unit to cinders. British quarters frankly admit that if the German effort suc-

His Father Obtains Lad's Confession Of Ambush Shooting

By the Associated Press

Abington, Pa., April 26.—A slender, wide-eyed schoolboy, charged with murder in the death of a girl classmate, blurted out to his college-instructor father tonight that he shot "because I loved the girl."

One pistol bullet hit 16-year-old Edith Snyder in the back and pierced her heart last night as she sat studying in the living room of her modest home. The shot was fired through a window.

Late today, Assistant District Attorney David E. Groshens said, Robert D. Heineman, also 16, of nearby Glenside, admitted shooting because he was "jealous" and added that he had tried to shoot himself but his pistol jammed.

After hours of questioning by police Robert was brought face to face with his father, a physical education instructor at Temple University in nearby Philadelphia. They met in a public hearing room of a justice of the peace after the boy was held without bail at a brief arraignment.

Tensely the father asked:

"Did you do this?"

"Yes I did," the boy replied.

"Why did you do it?"

"Because I loved the girl."

Groshens said the boy told him:

"I was jealous. I was in love with her and she had dates with other boys. On Sunday she told me she had met the most wonderful boy in the world. I couldn't stand it. I made up my mind to scare her."

Groshens said the admission came after police found a note the Heineman boy wrote Miss Snyder in school about three weeks ago. The note, signed "Bob," said:

"It is imperative that I see you at the end of the fifth period. If I don't see you someone will die."

Nats Repurchase Bonura As Giants Take Loss on Deal

By Shirley Povich.

Zeke Bonura bounced back to the Washington Club last night.

In a startling about-face that followed denials he was interested in reacquiring Bonura, Clark Griffith fetched the big first baseman from the New York Giants for "a little more" than the $7,500 waiver price.

BONURA

The Nats' owner completed the deal with President Horace Stoneham of the Giants by telephone. Coincidentally, Griffith announced that Rene Monteagudo, diminutive Cuban southpaw pitcher of the Nats, would be sent to the Giants' Jersey City farm team on option as a minor consideration in the Bonura purchase.

Bonura's return to the Nats was provoked, Griffith said, by the failure of Jimmy Wasdell to lend any power to the Nats' batting attack. Wasdell, in six games this season, has made only two hits, both singles.

Bonura has now figured in two transactions between the Nats and the Giants. At the end of the 1938 season, the Washington club sold the big first baseman to the Giants for $25,000. With Bonura returning to the Nats at approximately the waiver price, the Giants are now placed in the position of having "rented" him for one season for $17,000, plus the $15,000 salary they paid him last year.

Released by the Nats despite the

Senate Restores 2-3 of NLRB Budget Slash

Board Accused Of 'Radicalism' In House Hearing

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

While a House committee was hearing charges that the National Labor Relations Board was "replete with rotten radicalism," the Senate yesterday voted to restore two-thirds of the funds which the House cut from the board's 1941 budget estimates.

By its action, the Senate backed up its own Appropriations Committee in granting the board $228,000 of the $337,000 House slash. If the conferees approve the Senate proposal, the board will get $3,071,000 next year, compared with the President's estimate of $3,180,000.

The Senate committee's report contained specific recommendation of $45,600 which the House had refused to grant the board's division of economic reesarch, headed by Dr. David J. Saposs.

And it was against Dr. Saposs, as well as two or three other members of the NLRB staff, that a witness before the Smith Committee yesterday leveled his principal attack.

Radicalism Charged

Reopening the Smith hearings after several weeks' recess, Mapes Davidson, an NLRB trial examiner who last month resigned from the board and then was fired, offered testimony in bitter denunciation of the NLRB for alleged radicalism.

Davidson asserted that he resigned from the board two days after all the trial examiners in Washington had been called to a meeting at which Saposs had lectured them on "what should be gotten into the record, at a Labor Board hearing, aside from direct evidence, to show by inference that employers are fostering company-dominated unions."

After hearing the speech of Saposs, whom Davidson described as "a known Communist," the witness said he wrote a letter of resignation to the board.

Saposs Unfair, He Says

Davidson said that Saposs' remarks were "a plain and open invitation to sabotage every American conception of justice and fair play" by urging trial examiners to draw "inferences" from a record containing no direct evidence that the employer was guilty of encouraging company unionism.

"The history of company unionism shows that employers who do welfare work are generally anti-union, and those who deal with the big unions do not bother with that sort of thing," Davidson quoted Saposs as saying.

Davidson, who was himself under fire at a Smith committee hearing in January, told the committee yesterday that in one case his immediate superior on the board insisted that he include in his report evidence which Davidson characterized as "hearsay twice removed."

This case, involving charges against the Weyerhaeuser Lumber Co., in Washington State, had "no merit," the trial examiner found. But he said that his superior, Frank Bloom, asked him, ". . . what do you want—a resolution from the board of directors that the guy was fired for union activities?"

Excepts Leiserson

Davidson's letter of resignation to the board, on March 17, charged that "the majority of the members of your board continue brazenly and openly to foster Communists and kindred radicals. He specifically excepted, however, Dr. William M. Leiserson, one of the three board members; General Counsel Charles Fahy, Assistant General Counsel Robert Watts, and others.

"The review and economics divisions of the board are loaded with Reds of varying shades, and . . . this communistic vermin infests even some of the regional offices," he alleged.

Two days later, Davidson received a telegram from the board that he had been discharged "with prejudice and without accrued annual leave for addressing a false and scurrilous letter to the board." The trial examiner had 57 days accrued leave, but the board's action prevented him from taking it.

He then wrote a joint letter to NLRB Chairman J. Warren Madden and Edwin S. Smith, board member, denouncing them for their "scurvy trick" in "cheating me out of money."

"Nonsense," Says Madden

Madden thereupon issued a statement characterizing Davidson's "outgivings" as "obvious nonsense" and pointing out that the trial examiner previously had "never intimated" any charge of communism against the board.

Fahy observed that "for two and a half years" Davidson served as trial examiner "without revealing what apparently became an authentic distress of mind caused by his naive acceptance of malicious rumors against two board staff members and sweeping generalities against the staff at large. His attack at the time of his discharge was recklessly launched and continues in the same vein. It is to be regretted that Mr. Davidson remains in a state of mind which precludes reasoned inquiry into facts."

Following Davidson to the stand was Herbert Fuchs, NLRB attorney. Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland drew a laugh when he brought out that Fuchs in his personal notes had written the word "nuts" in answer to exceptions filed in the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. case. Pointing out that the expression was not used in discussing the matter with the board, Fuchs explained that the slang was "a form of shorthand" indicating to himself that the exceptions were unfounded.

Gill, Lubin Urge U. S. Program To Help Victims of Machines

Permanent Work System on a Large Scale Proposed to Monopoly Committee for Those Who Lose Jobs to Industrial Advances

By the Associated Press

Two top-ranking Administration advisers urged a long-time governmental program yesterday to care for thousands who are jobless because of labor-saving machinery and other technological advances.

Testifying before the Monopoly Committee, Corrington Gill, Assistant Commissioner of the Works Projects Administration, recommended "a permanent work program" as the solution. Isador Lubin, Labor Department statistical expert and a member of the Monopoly Committee, said "some way" must be found, but offered no specific program.

Lubin said that Federal and State governments already had recognized in workmen's compensation laws the responsibility of employers and the public for disabled employes.

But no provision is made, he continued, for the "skilled worker who has devoted his life to an industrial process and who suddenly finds himself 'disabled' because a machine or new process has made it impossible for him to earn full wages at his former employment."

Inventions, labor-saving machinery, and technological advances must be continued and encouraged, Lubin testified, but added that Government and industry must find some way to see that loss of jobs does not fall upon "innocent victims."

Gill, veteran of various relief agencies and programs of the present administration, testified that recent recovery from the 1930 depression had failed to bring expected employment gains. He urged a "large scale public works program" that would benefit workers and industries.

Gorrell Says Industry Wants CAA Intact

Air Transport President Asserts Aviation Needs A 'Period of Stability'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 26.—Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association of America, said today the industry favored "the continuation of the Civil Aeronautics Authority as an independent agency of government."

President Roosevelt's fourth reorganization plan, submitted to Congress April 11, placed the CAA, created in 1938 as an independent agency, under the Commerce Department.

"Civil aeronautics had been subjected to constant legislative and jurisdictional changes prior to 1938," Gorrell said in a written statement. "It needs a period of stability."

Since 1938, he said, "civil aeronautics has made a record unsurpassed in the history of the industry, either here or abroad.

"At this stage in the development of aviation and in the light of world conditions, the need for a fully independent authority is even greater than it was in 1938 . . ."

"No step should be taken," he asserted, "which would materially alter the conditions under which the extraordinary advances of the last two years have been made and which would impair the power and position of the authority in carrying forward the program which it had undertaken."

Ramspeck Bill Quota Rider Believed Dead

Bulow Anticipates Senate Committee Will Reject Proposal

A double setback for the State-quota plan in extending civil service was scored in the Senate yesterday.

Chairman Bulow, of the Senate Civil Service Committee, said after hearings on the Ramspeck bill closed that he believed the committee would cut the Keller-Nichols rider out of the measure.

The Keller-Nichols plan, approved by the House, would exclude from the proposed civil service extension Federal employes from States over their quotas until other States were brought up to their share.

A similar House amendment, limiting new noncivil service appointments in the Labor Department and Federal Security agency to persons from underquota States, was left out when the Senate passed the appropriation bill for these agencies.

Several thousand Government employes from the District, Maryland and Virginia, would be affected by the quota plan in the Ramspeck bill. All three are far over their quotas.

The committee yesterday heard two witnesses, Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, of the League of American Civil Service, and Theresa Scanlon, who spoke for former Federal employes seeking reinstatement.

Senator Bulow said that additional written evidence will be received until Tuesday.

Regulation of Water Carriers Is Urged by Joint Committee

By the Associated Press

A joint House-Senate committee submitted to Congress yesterday compromise legislation subjecting domestic water carriers to regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, said in a statement that he believed the bill would "lay a firm foundation upon which to build a sound and permanent transportation policy."

"Such a policy," he asserted, "designed to accomplish a healthy transportation system by land and by water is one of the vital needs of the day."

As reported by the joint committee the bill would abolish reduced rates on Government traffic other than military or naval personnel or property, carried by railroads which have received land grants.

It also provides for a three-member board of investigation and research to determine the type of service for which each type of transportation is best fitted.

The measure exempts from regulation those water carriers engaged in transportation of commodities in bulk, including liquid cargo in tank vessels not in competition with land transportation. It also gives the ICC authority to exempt water transportation not in substantial competition with other carriers.

The measure also would modify or repeal some provisions of the present Interstate Commerce Act. Motor carriers which operate solely within a State would be exempted from regulation, provided the ICC found they did not affect uniform interstate regulation.

The power of the ICC to establish through routes over short-line railroads would be modified to permit the commission to require such routes under specified restrictions.

House Lets Pension Bill Veto Stand

Vote of 217 to 143 Less Than Required For Overriding

By the Associated Press

The House refused yesterday to override President Roosevelt's veto of a bill granting increased pensions to 362 widows of Civil War veterans.

The vote, 217 for overriding and 143 against, came after a plea by Representative Lesinski (Democrat), of Michigan, to overrule the President in his contention that "to be fair, it would be necessary to grant similar increases to many more on the rolls."

The motion to override failed because a two-thirds majority was required to effect such action. The measure was one of three vetoed yesterday by Mr. Roosevelt.

The pension bill would increase the widows' pensions varying amounts up to $30 monthly. The highest pension under the bill would be $50 a month.

The House on Thursday overrode the President's veto of legislation to give special allowances to 15,000 Spanish War volunteers who served in the Philippine Islands after the treaty of peace with Spain.

362 Widows Involved

Yesterday veto was of a bill providing from $40 to $50 a month for 246 Civil War widows not now eligible for the higher rate and who are receiving $40 because they have reached 70 years of age. The remaining 16 widows would be increased under the bill to $30 a month, they having been ineligible for this rate under existing law because of the later dates of their marriages.

Existing law provides a $50 monthly pension if the widow was the wife of the veteran during his Civil War service.

The President said to single out this small group of 362 widows "for special consideration would cause dissatisfaction and disappointment unless equal treatment were afforded similar meritorious cases."

Small Part of Total

"This group of 362 widows," he added, "is only a small part of the total number of 50,017 Civil War widows on the roles March 31, 1940, many of whom would no doubt be found to be in similar circumstances and merit equal consideration and treatment."

Also yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt vetoed legislation which would have liberalized the retired pay of certain former Army officers.

The measure would have allowed certain officers who have performed active duty since retirement to credit such service so as to increase the multiple of years of commissioned service in computing their retired pay.

The President said the War Department was of the opinion that existing law was "based upon sound principles" and was "as liberal to the interest of the Government."

Rental Bill Vetoed

Still another veto was applied to a bill which would have authorized payments of rental allowance to Navy and Marine Corps officers who occupied Government quarters at the Panama Canal during the fiscal year 1935 and 1936.

The President said the bill would grant reimbursements "greatly in excess" of the amounts payable to Army officers in the same situation.

While objecting on this ground, the President said he would not disapprove of legislation which would provide the same relief for the Navy and Marine officers as that given Army officers under the act of May 13, 1938.

Farm Changes In Wages Bill Stir Up Fight

Economic Enslavery Of 1,000,000 Charged As Aim of Program

By the Associated Press

The Barden amendments to exempt large groups of persons from the wage-hour law stirred a furious debate in the House yesterday with opponents charging that they would lead to the economic "re-enslavement" of 1,000,000 or more workers and proponents replying that they were necessary for the farmer's welfare.

Debate, lasting for hours, centered on a provision in the Barden bill stating that the wage-hour law shall not apply to 16 operations connected with the processing and manufacture of farm products.

The discussion laid the groundwork for votes next week on whether many, few or no workers shall be exempted from the statute, which now limits working hours to 42 a week and guarantees wages of 30 cents an hour.

Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, pleading for the exemption of the farm processors, declared this was in the interest of the farmer because the present law increases processing costs, and the farmer "gets what's left" after the processor has deducted his costs.

Opponents, however, contended that the Barden amendments had a different aim than aiding the tiller of the soil. Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, for one, declared that a "log-rolling combination" of lumbering, cannery and dairying interests were seeking to deprive 1,000,000 of the law's benefits.

Party lines split. Republicans and Democrats spoke for and against the Barden proposals. Several, opposing them, said that amendments proposed by the House Labor Committee were as far as they would go. These amendments would exempt some farm processors from hours restrictions but would leave the wage minimum unchanged.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, who opposed Barden's amendments, said it was true that income in the South was lower than in other parts of the country and expressed belief that the wage-hour law would prove of benefit there.

Senate Approves Neilson as Judge

GEORGE D. NEILSON

prosecutor at Police Court by E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel. It was Prettyman's first appointment.

Yesterday he spoke of his experience as a prosecutor in light of his new job, stating:

"I have learned to appreciate the value of close cooperation with the district attorney's office and the corporation counsel's office. After all, the members of these two offices are public servants to the same extent the judges are, and my policy shall be gladly to give proper consideration to their opinions and recommendations. I shall not lose sight of the fact that I once was a prosecutor myself."

He said he expected the police department to "present good cases," in his court and that the "evidence must be produced before he will convict anyone."

Judge Neilson is a member of the Junior Board of Commerce, the Junior Bar Association, District Bar Association, Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity; Delta Theta Phi, national honorary legal fraternity. He attends the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Three of his staunchest supporters were Chairman King of the Senate District Committee; Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee and Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah.

Army Asks Senate To Boost Funds

Secretary Woodring yesterday asked the Senate to boost the Army's 1941 appropriations about $42,000,000 above the $784,999,094 voted by the House.

In a letter to Chairman Thomas of the Senate Military Appropriations subcommittee, Woodring sought restoration of several items recommended in President Roosevelt's budget estimates which were eliminated in the House. These included funds for 109 planes, $14,250,000 for "educational" orders, $3,981,000 for an air base at Anchorage, Alaska; $580,000 for gas masks, and $1,000,000 to start construction of an additional transport.

Danes Ask U. S. To Guard Ships

By International News Service

Denmark's shipping interests have formally requested the protection of the United States Government for $100,000,000 of Danish shipping caught in American waters when Germany took Denmark into "protective custody" April 9.

The vessels are subject to seizure by the Allies should they venture out on the high seas. State Department officials last night pronounced the problem "the most difficult presented to this Government since the outset of the European war."

Byrd Sails to Ask Renewal of Funds For Expedition

By the Associated Press

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd is hurrying back from the Antarctic to plead—if need be—for funds to support the Government's polar expedition for a second year.

Quitting the flagship Bear at Valparaiso, Chile, the explorer was booked to sail yesterday on the liner Santa Elena for New York.

The House has rejected a $250,000 request for further Byrd expedition expenses, and indications are that the Senate may act before Byrd reaches the United States May 14.

Defeat of the appropriation, however, would not necessarily doom chances of getting the money, for it could be voted later in a special bill.

Meanwhile, four months of complete darkness have descended upon the 33 men left at the west base at Little America, and the long Antarctic winter is approaching for the 26 at the east base, 1,200 miles distant.

Democracy Facing Test, Says Cromwell

Trenton, N. J., April 26 (AP).—James H. R. Cromwell, Minister to Canada, asserted tonight that "our Democratic ideals and institutions now stand—literally—at Armageddon."

Cromwell, also candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from New Jersey, said in a speech before the 1940 New Jersey model legislature for youth, that "rival systems of government, rival ideologies, press close on every hand; their proponents loudly claim for them an efficiency, both for war and for peace, which the democracies have never possessed and indeed, so they say, can never attain."

Form Agency to Aid Greenland

By the Associated Press

Henrik de Kauffmann, the Danish Minister, announced yesterday establishment of an "American-Danish Greenland Commission" to assist him in providing for "the welfare of the people of Greenland."

In his announcement, the minister said that "as a result of the German occupation of Denmark the population of Greenland will be deprived of supplies from the outside world, these supplies under normal circumstances being sent every summer from Denmark."

The commission will have its headquarters in New York and be headed by Hans Christian Sonne, of that city. Sonne will be assisted by Dr. Paul Bentzen, of Roosevelt Hospital.

In addition, De Kauffman said, the following have been invited to join the commission:

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde, former American Minister to Denmark; Dr. John Dynely Prince, professor at Columbia University and former American Minister to Denmark; Dr. Henry Goddard Leach, president, the American-Scandinavian Foundation; Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president, Johns Hopkins University; Leonard T. Beale, president of the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Co., and Capt. Bob Bartlett, New York, explorer.

Homer Martin Quits as Head Of Auto Union

Labor Leader to Go Into Private Business Effective June 1

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 26.—Homer Martin, former Baptist preacher who entered the front ranks of the Nation's labor leaders, resigned today as president of the A. F. L. affiliated United Automobile Workers.

One-time head of the thousands of organized workers in the automotive industry, Martin said he was turning to private business "as a substitute from the heavy demands" of the labor movement.

"I leave the labor movement, temporarily at least, with the knowledge that I have always served the interests of labor honestly and to the best of my ability," Martin said.

Effective June 1

His retirement, rumored for some time, will become effective June 1.

Martin became president of the U. A. W. in 1936, led the auto workers from the A. F. L. into the C. I. O. fold, and piloted the quickly growing union through the 1937 sitdown strikes.

A year later rumblings of internal strife were heard from the union. Early in 1939 the feud broke into the open when Martin sought unsuccessfully to oust members of the executive board opposed to his policies. He and his opposition accused each other of submitting to communistic influences.

Election Defeat Severe

His foes appealed to John L. Lewis and associate heads of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Martin subsequently was ousted and a schism resulted with Martin leading one faction back into the A. F. of L.

The factional struggle, which shoved Martin back to comparative obscurity, reached an anticlimax last week when General Motors Corporation employe elections designated the U. A. W.-C. I. O. as bargain agency in 48 plants and the U. A. W.-A. F. of L. in only five plants.

Roosevelt Chides States as Laggards On Resettlement

Warm Springs, Ga., April 26 (AP).—In an impromptu talk at Pine Mountain Valley resettlement project, President Roosevelt mildly reproved the 48 States today for not developing cooperative resettlement programs more fully.

To members of the 182 families clustered along a street of the project, a few miles from here, the Chief Executive recalled that he once had voiced a hope that the States would profit by the example set in the little community. But, he said, apparently they have failed to do so.

Afterward, he drove his touring car through the 13,000-acre project, which he helped establish.

Mr. Roosevelt said at a press conference he was leaving tomorrow for Washington and would arrive Sunday morning. But he said he had no information from the Capital worthy of a news story.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Artur Rubinstein plays a piano recital Friday night in the Polish Embassy for the benefit of the Paderevski fund for Polish relief. Program: Chaconne (Bach-Busoni), "La Cathedrale E gloutie," "Ondine" and "L'Isle Joyeuse" (Debussy), Barcarolle, Valse, Mazurek and Polonaise (Chopin), "La Maja y el Ruisenor" (Granados), "Danza Ritual del Fuego" (Falla).

For the cause of Polish relief, the drawing rooms of the Polish Embassy were filled last evening with auditors assembled to hear Artur Rubinstein, the distinguished Polish pianist, who contributed his artistic services. From the purely musical side, the occasion was most interesting in that it permitted a closer acquaintance with the technical and interpretative resources of the musician than is afforded by a large concert hall. This proximity to the performer resulted in a firmer conviction of his greatness as a virtuoso of the keyboard.

BROWN

His handling of Busoni's majestic transcription of the Bach chaconne was masterly both in details and in proportional dimensions. His remarkable command of dynamics was adjutant to his performance which had a sweep and urgency that suggested an irresistible force expanding in tonal involutions. The vigor and vitality of the reading had a momentum of overwhelming power, while the clarity of the exposition conveyed the intellectual potency of the music.

In his Debussy group, Rubinstein utilized subtleties of touch as well as richness of coloring. "The Engulfed Cathedral" was nobly proportioned in structure and finely tinted in tone, and the "Ondine" prelude was a persuasive manipulation of poetic arabesques with delicacies of outline. In "L'Isle Joyeuse" there was a heady abandon and a spontaneous zest that carried the hearer on a current of happiness.

His Chopin group, consisting of the barcarolle, a waltz, a mazurka and the A major polonaise, was scintillant in its evocation of romantic fantasy. He was sedulous in his preservation of the Chopin idiom and in the integrity of the harmonic fabric.

That was as far as the prepared program went, but the enthusiasm of the audience would not allow him to rest until after he had added more. His choice fell upon Spanish compositions of contrasting character: the flowery poesy of Granados' "La Maja y el Ruisenor" and the primitive emotionalism of Falla's "Danze Ritual del Fuego."

U. S. Indicts Western Union In Racing Case

Individuals Also Cited as 'Conspiring' To Transmit Prices

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 26.—The Federal Government moved again in its anti-gambling drive today—this time with grand jury indictments against the Western Union Telegraph Co. and 18 individuals.

Three indictments were returned after an investigation of wire and radio services in the dissemination of horse racing information. One of them accused the telegraph company of conspiring with 11 individuals to violate the lottery laws against carrying price lists across State lines.

A second indictment brought radio broadcasting into the investigation for the first time since the Government launched its offensive against distribution of gambling information last fall. It accused four Chicagoans—Frank J. (Chew Tobacco) Ryan, Hymie (Loud Mouth) Levin, Harry (Greasy Thumb) Guzik, and Maurice L. Goldstein—of conspiring with other persons, unknown to the jury, to maintain a miniature broadcasting apparatus to transmit race track results to the 400 Club in Chicago.

The third indictment, alleging conspiracy to further a lottery, named three Chicagoans.

United States District Attorney Campbell, who identified Levin and Guzik as former lieutenants in the Capone gang, said the indictments grew out of an investigation of race news services that sprang up after M. L. Annenberg, wealthy Philadelphia publisher, abandoned the Nationwide News Service last fall.

Ten of the individuals named were formerly associated with Annenberg's Nationwide News Service. Among them was James M. Ragen, sr., of Chicago, former general manager for Nationwide. Annenberg pleaded guilty in Federal Court last Tuesday to evasion of $1,217,296 of income taxes.

Dies Witness Gets Two Years For Perjury

Fraser S. Gardner, 39-year-old detective of 3224 Wisconsin avenue northwest, who pleaded guilty to committing perjury before the Dies Committee, was given a suspended sentence of two to four years by the District Court yesterday.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts rebuked Gardner for testifying under oath that he had no connection with the Silver Shirts, when as a matter of fact he was an employe of the organization's magazine. of the organization's magazine, to put Gardner in prison, but that he would suspend the sentence because he felt that the minimum term of two years would be "too severe in this case."

Representative Martin nS. Dies and the committee on un-American activities demanded Gardner's prosecution after the perjury was exposed, charging that he made the false statements in order to get a job as committee investigator with the idea of sabotaging its work.

Army Ribs Navy but Fails To Get Its Goat

Court Outflanks War Department By Reprieving Beasts

Already tangled in litigation, a proposal to use certain Navy goats as targets in Army tests of a deadly new explosive yesterday brought the Army and Navy into brief verbal conflict.

It was a moral victory for the Navy, long trained in diplomacy.

From ubiquitous Mr. Anonymous, a postcard was received by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson. It said:

"It is highly appropriate that the goat—Navy mascot—will be slaughtered in wholesale numbers by our brave (and bloody) American Army at Aberdeen, Md., April 30, 1940."

"Worse Than You Thought"

The postcard was forwarded by Johnson to Assistant Secretary of Navy Lewis Compton, with this comment:

"I thought you might be interested in seeing the inclosed. The situation is even worse than you thought."

"I am unaware," promptly replied Compton, "of any compelling reason for special comment concerning the slaughter, under Army auspices, of certain Navy goats.

"While the Navy Department does not look with favor on such procedure, the force and effect of military custom is, in this instance, acknowledged without comment. The Army habitually gets the Navy's goat, but rather than risk friction within the armed forces, the Navy Department has adopted a temporary decision to keep on hand an adequate supply of goats to be expended as necessary to meet Army requirements."

Goats Get a Reprieve

Mr. Anonymous, though, was wrong. No goats will be slaughtered April 30 because the animal lovers, represented by an Illinois pet magazine, have pending in the court at Towson, Md., an injunction suit to prevent the tests at Aberdeen. A hearing has been set for May 6 and until then no goats will be bombed.

Should the bombs inventor, Lester P. Barlow, of Baltimore, win the right to test his weapon on goats tethered in a field, a date will be set. Then the goats, supplied from some mysterious Navy source, will be targets.

Former Utility Official Given Year in Perjury

Missourian Guilty Of False Testimony At SEC Hearing

St. Louis, April 26 (AP).—Albert C. Laun, former vice president and State lobbyist of the Union Electric Co., of Missouri, pleaded no contest in Federal court today to three counts of perjury in testimony given before Securities and Exchange Commission examiners investigating business practices of the company.

Federal Judge Charles B. Davis immediately sentenced him to one year and a day on each count, the sentences to run concurrently, and fined him $1,500 on each count, or $4,500.

A plea for suspension of the sentence was denied.

Both Laun and Frank J. Boehm, former executive vice president, resigned as a result of disclosures in connection with the SEC investigation. Boehm also was indicted by the Federal grand jury, charged with perjury in five counts. His trial is set for June 17.

The indictment charged Laun testified falsely in denying that he had made contributions of Union Electric funds to candidates for the Legislature; in denying he had participated in or had knowledge of the padding of expense accounts and the payment of "kickbacks" from company lawyers and others to certain employes.

The "kickbacks" and padded expense accounts were disclaimed as sources of the alleged "slush funds" for lobbying activities.

Fred J. Martin, a rural sales engineer for Union Electric, pleaded guilty on a perjury charge last January and was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $501. He was released on probation after serving about ten days in jail.

High to Appear For Sentencing In Weight Case

Luther W. High, president of the High Ice Cream Co., will appear in Police Court Friday for sentencing, upon his plea of guilty to ten informations charging short-weight sales of chickens in ten of the company's stores here.

It was testified that District weight inspectors made purchases in the stores and found that chickens were sold "dressed" at live weight, making a difference of approximately three-fourths of a pound per chicken.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman told the court the chickens were prepared for sale at a Maryland farm and sent to the High stores with live-weight tags attached. None of the stores visited by the weight inspectors had scales, Korman said.

High explained that he bought the poultry on the "consignment basis" and that he relied on the wholesaler exclusively. Judge John P. McMahon set May 3 as the date of sentencing, declaring he wanted to investigate the facts thoroughly.

Auditor Commits Suicide, 20th Here Since April 9

Walter M. McCurdy, 48, auditor for the Union Trust Co., killed himself by carbon monoxide gas yesterday, the twentieth person to commit suicide in the District since April 9.

Apparently despondent because of financial difficulties, McCurdy was found dead in his automobile parked in his garage at the rear of his home, 1600 Newton street northwest, by a domestic employe, Andrew Edwards. A hose ran from the exhaust pipe into the car.

McCurdy had been absent from work the past eight days, assisting his wife and three children who have been ill of scarlet fever.

The children—two sons, 3 and 13, and a daughter, 9, were stricken first. Their mother, Mrs. Von Zelle McCurdy, was taken ill while caring for them.

A note was on the man's body, addressed to his wife. On the envelope was written, "Father, forgive me." The letter was turned over to Mrs. McCurdy.

Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy certified the death to be a suicide.

Glen Echo Mayor Is Unopposed

Mrs. Beulah McCuen, who has been mayor of Glen Echo, Md., since the Hatch Act forced her husband to surrender the office last August, will be unopposed for reelection in the town election May 6.

Still uncertain whether the boy she holds is her son, Mrs. Frances Mahoney, 19, yesterday arranged for a trust fund for Paul Dennis, 19 months old, from the $3,500 awarded her by a jury against a Los Angeles hospital over an alleged baby mix-up. She said she and her husband had "become very attached to him. And he's in our home to stay—like he truly is our own child, which he may be"

Dr. Arthur Louis Day Wins Geophysical Union Medal

Retired Director of Carnegie Institution Laboratory Is Presented With Bowie Award For 'Unselfish Devotion' to Cause of Science

The highest honor of the American Geophysical Union went yesterday to Dr. Arthur Louis Day, retired director of the Carnegie Institution's geophysical laboratory.

R. M. Field, president of the A. G. U., presented to the 70-year-old scientist, who lives in Bethesda, Md., the Bowie Medal, which is awarded annually for "unselfish devotion to cooperative effort in the science of geophysics."

At the final general assembly of the union's four-day meeting, held in the National Academy of Sciences Building, reports were presented showing an increase of 140 members and improved coordination of geophysical and geological activities.

Dr. J. A. Fleming, of the Carnegie Institution, was reelected general secretary for three years. Dr. L. H. Adams, also a Carnegie scientist, was elected president of the newly formed tectonophysics section, and Dr. David Griggs, of Harvard University, secretary.

Holding a joint one-day meeting simultaneously in another part of the National Academy Building, the Institute of Radio Engineers and the International Radio Union (American section) heard L. V. Berkner and S. L. Seaton, of the Carnegie Institution, explain how magnetic storms may be forecast with reasonable accuracy.

Just as maximum sunspot activity occurs at 11-year intervals, so do the magnetic storms—bugbear of radio, telegraph and cable operators—produced by solar eruptions seem to follow a cycle, Berkner and Seaton explained. The period is approximately 27 days.

There seems to be a definte relationship between the storms and the ionization density of the upper atmosphere, 100 miles or more above the earth's surface, they pointed out.

Dr. N. Smith, of the National Bureau of Standards, described ionospheric studies made here and in southwestern Texas during the annular eclipse on April 7. The observations confirmed previous findings, he said, that the "E" region of the ionosphere—60 to 100 miles above the earth—is affected by solar eclipses, with consequent effect upon radio reception.

The American Physical Society, which ends its annual Washington meeting at the Bureau of Standards today, held a formal dinner at the Wardman Park Hotel last night. Dr. George Gamow, George Washington University physicist, spoke.

More at Work Than in 1939

Secretary Perkins said yesterday that private employment increased less than usual from February to March, but that the total of persons at work was nearly 1,000,000 greater than a year ago.

The increase from mid-February to mid-March, was 165,000. Retail stores added nearly 150,000 workers in March to handle Easter business.

Comdr. Tuggle Named Attache to Turkey

The Navy yesterday announced the assignment of Commander Richard B. Tuggle, on duty in the office of the chief of naval operations here, as naval and air attache at the American Embassy, Ankara, Turkey.

Officials said the appointment is the first made to Turkey in many years.

Scalise Named In 52 Counts Of Extortion

Indictment Accuses Building Union Chief Of Conspiracy Also

By the Associated Press

New York, April 26.—George Scalise, the $20,000-a-year leader of 70,000 laborers as president of the A. F. L. Building Service Employes International Union, today was indicted for conspiracy and extortion of a total of $97,150 from employers and members of his own organization.

If convicted, he would be liable to a 15-to-30-year term on each of the 52 extortion counts and to a 1-to-3-year sentence on the conspiracy charge. In his youth he served four and a half years for white slavery.

Also indicted for conspiracy was Isadore Schwartz, a representative of the international who, with his brother, Louis, already was under another indictment charging conspiracy to extort.

Scalise pleaded not guilty.

His attorney, John Kadel—who already had pointed to District Attorney Dewey's candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination and cried "politics"—asserted that the case was the result of a four-months effort by the district attorney's office to find an indictment against a national figure.

Business Needs Freer Conditions, Engineers Told

This country "is not getting the power to produce the goods," Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, told a dinner meeting of the fifth conference, local student chapters of the American Society of Civil Engineers at Wesley Hall last night.

More than 100 students attending represented George Washington University, Catholic University, the University of Maryland and Johns Hopkins University. The gathering concluded an all-day session at George Washington University.

Likening business conditions to a machine, Thorpe declared that "we've tightened all the nuts all along the line" in a "well-intentioned" effort to revive business conditions. He expressed the hope that the next party in power, "no matter what party," will "loosen the nuts."

Sweden Closes Center Channel To Stockholm

Others Remain Open; Secret Zone to Be Set Up Around Capital

By the United Press

Stockholm, Saturday, April 27.—It was officially announced today that the central ship channel leading into the port of Stockholm has been closed to all traffic.

The channel—known as the Sandhamn Channel—is the largest of the three waterways leading through the dense skerries archipelago into the port.

All lighthouses along the Sandhamn Channel have been blacked out.

The northern and southern channels still are open to merchant shipping.

Authorities explained the precautions were part of the government's program to speed up defense preparations at points outside Stockholm and to create strategic areas outside the capital into "a secret military and naval zone."

French Weigh Course

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Paris, April 26.—The French war committee at a meeting late today was reported to have taken up plans for a quick shift of France's military might in case the war expands to new territory.

The meeting was described as a direct offshoot of the two-day session of the Allied supreme war council here earlier this week. The council was reported unofficially to have decided to oppose by force any further German aggression anywhere in Europe.

Pursuant to that decision, the war committee in secret session purportedly weighed the factors which would be involved in any thrust by Chancellor Adolf Hitler at such a territory as the lowlands, the Balkans or Sweden.

One of the primary points of the committee's consideration undoubtedly was the possibility of a German attack on Sweden. French technicians have stressed the contention that Hitler's campaign to get control of Sweden's iron ore has failed, and that the failure must be consolidated and capitalized on by the Allies.

[A story in the April 26 issue of The Post quoted remarks made by Wollmar Bostrom, Swedish Minister, at the Augustana Lutheran Church.

[The quotations carried by The Post did not clearly state Mr. Bostrom's position and the heading appearing in The Post, "Envoy Expects War in Sweden," was erroneous.

[Replying to a greeting from Dr. Felix W. Hanson, president of the New York Conference, Augustana Synod of America, Mr. Bostrom said: "Clouds hanging over four northern countries have burst over three of them and are still hanging over Sweden. Maybe we will escape the horrors of war, maybe not."

[The Post regrets this inaccuracy and is glad to make this correction.]

The French have made much of the claim that if Germany strikes at southern Sweden, the allied forces in Narvik would have direct rail communication with Boden, Sweden, near the tip of the Gulf of Bothnia and strategically near the rich iron ore mine. Thus, they claim, Germany could be cut off from the source of iron ore for the duration of the war.

The French general staff claimed today that within a matter of hours the Allied forces on the Norwegian fronts would outnumber the Germans. With the Allies represented as holding the upper hand in the North Sea, the general staff contended that they will be in a dominating position with respect to all of Norway as soon as they are able to sever all of Germany's communications with her expeditionary force except by air.

Berlin to Make Declaration Today

them to it by acting to take Denmark and Norway under the "protection" of the Reich.

Germany already has released a number of documents purported to have originated in the Polish foreign office in support of her conquest of Poland last September.

While the diplomatic scene was thus filled, German troops, with the air force showing the way, were spreading out in southern Norway with the aim of forcing back British and French coming down from the north, reports indicated.

Military information on the northern campaign, however, was exceedingly scarce.

News from Narvik, German-held Arctic iron ore port, was especially reserved, a communique announcing only that the British resumed a bombardment yesterday.

Berlin circles viewed the military operations throughout in a favorable light, however, and Dienst aus Deutschland noted "with satisfaction" that "in all the occupied Norwegian districts there have been no acts of sabotage of any sort."

It said Norwegian troops who still were fighting the German occupation were regarded without reserve as showing "knightly respect for the law of war."

Berlin newspapers tonight displayed prominently communiques announcing that the British had bombed Oslo from the air.

The high command said the British did no military damage. Several German planes were damaged by some splinters during a British attack on an airport near Trondheim, however.

DNB, official news agency, disclosed use by the Allies of motorized troops, saying several columns had been successfully attacked by German planes.

Maryland Student Crusades For Square Deal for Snakes

"Tommy" St. Clair and Lois Holland, University of Maryland coeds, get a lesson on how to rub a snake the right way from Elias Cohen, 19-year-old University student, who has a collection of reptile pets

Serpents Aren't as Evil as Their Reputation, Says Youth Who Carries Them About in His Pockets

Elias Cohen, 19-year-old University of Maryland student, is crusading to get a "square deal" for the snake family.

A student of herpetology for five years, Cohen is so chummy with the wriggly reptiles he carries them around in his pockets as pets.

He is an authority on the 26 different kinds of snakes found in the State of Maryland and lectures on the subject an average of once a week.

The "bogey" stories about snakes, he traces back to the "apple episode in the Garden of Eden." Ever since then, he claims, "the snake has been in the bad graces of the public.

"There are so many old superstitions about snakes that still persist," Cohen says. "For instance, many people believe snakes milk cows or roll after people by forming themselves into a hoop-shape."

Cohen says he has handled hundreds of snakes and has been bitten several times, but only by the nonpoisonous ones. "There are only two poisonous snakes in Maryland—the rattler and the copperhead—and I don't take any chances when I handle these," he says.

At his home in Baltimore, Cohen has a collection of 30 live snakes, kept in a cage. Some of them he brings to the university campus just to show the other students they are really harmless. But, he adds, as a word of caution:

"The best rule to follow if you don't know snakes is not to bother them and they won't bother you."

Germans Break Trondheim Ring

ceeds, it will represent a major victory which will make the Allied task in Norway very difficult.

The break through at Roros came today after a vigorous battle at Tolga 15 miles south of Roros, to which the Germans had retired yesterday. In this battle, in which German planes participated by bombing the town, the Norwegian defenders were compelled to retire toward the Swedish border, and are now reported around Brekken just as the Norwegian defenders of Elverum were forced toward Trysil, also near the Swedish border.

Some new Norwegian recruits at Tolga were told by their own officers to take off their uniforms because, in their present inadequate state of training, they would have been merely useless "cannon fodder."

At the same time, it appears that the Germans are meeting strong resistance in their further progress presumably from British forces which are advancing from Storen through the Gaul Valley. Heavy artillery fire whose thunder could be heard across the Swedish frontier was reported from north of Roros today.

But the Germans are also rushing up reinforcements along the Oester Valley by both motor cars and air, and according to a Norwegian headquarters report part of these has been detached at Tynset and sent up the mountain roads towards Kvikne in the apparent effort to advance on Storen from the south and cut the Allied line of communication from Dombas and Andelsnes, their landing base.

Allies Reinforced

Meanwhile, continuing their putsch up the Gudbrands Valley, the second route leading from Oslo to the western coast, the Germans have made further progress and are now approaching Kven, just south of Otta and only about 30 miles south of Dombas, the central junction point of the Oslo-Trondheim-Andelsnes Railroad whose loss would spell disaster to the Allied troops at Storen.

The Germans are well supplied with artillery, tanks and planes and claim to have bombed railroad stations and troop transports and to have dispersed near Dombas "the remnants of the main Norwegian army."

But at Kven the Germans have met determined resistance by both British and Norwegian forces, and according to the Norwegian headquarters report, have been stopped. Two of the German tanks are said to have been destroyed.

At Trondheim itself, the situation remains unclear. According to all indications, the Germans have attempted to encircle the Allied forces whose main position runs north of Steinkjer in the direction of Snaasa, by rushing troops along the western shore of Snaasa Lake and seeking to establish a new front line in the Allies' rear, north of Namsos. But, according to Allied reports, this attempt has been defeated with considerable German losses due to the timely arrival of Allied reinforcements in troops, artillery and airplanes.

The new troops are said to be French Foreign Legionnaires and Alpine Chausseurs and the French now equal the British in numbers in this region. The new Allied planes consist of both bombers and pursuit planes, which have been provided with a new air base in the shape of three hangar ships "somewhere in a Norwegian fjord."

While these reinforcements were being disembarked at Namsos, the Germans subjected them to a heavy air bombardment but, according to Allied reports, all but four of the new troopers escaped death or injury. Immediately after this embarkation they were rushed to the front through woods which the German planes vainly strafed with machine-gun fire, and they arrived in time to stop the German advance. Also, when the British planes got into action, the German planes, says the Allied report, disappeared and did not reappear despite good flying weather.

However, the Germans have also landed reinforcements in Steinkjer Fjord allegedly from a German cruiser, and the battle still continues.

Two Steamers Sunk

Stockholm, April 26 (AP).—A Danish steamer of 250 tons and another unidentified steamer sank today in the Oresund, narrow strait between Sweden and Denmark, possibly victims of mines which drifted into the passageway with the ice.

One Swedish source advanced the theory that new mines laid by the British off the coast of Norway might have caused the sinkings.

Nazis Seized Allied Records

Stockholm (Saturday), April 27 (U.P.).—Reliable informants said today that German forces which seized Copenhagen "found the British and French legations napping" and that all records of the Allied diplomatic establishments were seized including their code books.

What information the Germans obtained from the Allied records the informants did not profess to know, but they suggested something of their nature possibly might be made known when the German foreign minister delivers his "important political address" later today.

It was recalled that the Germans attempted to make belated capital of documents they claimed to have found in Warsaw when they occupied the Polish capital.

U. S. Friction With Britain Is Lessening

State Department Announces Summary Of Blockade Talks

sures, including the forcing of American ships into dangerous waters of the combat zone, the searching of American mails, as well as cessation of purchases of American fruits, tobacco and other farm products in order to conserve their exchange for buying of munitions, had seriously ruffled relations between the United States and Allied governments.

Summary of Statement

Last night's statement said of the conferences that have been held:

"The representatives of the French and the British embassies have stated in these conversations that their governments desire to diminish the inconveniences caused by neutral trade and interests in every practicable way so long as this does not lessen the effect of the contraband control in all its branches which the United Kingdom and France consider an absolute necessary part of the war in which the two countries are at present engaged."

The American representatives, however, "made it clear that in discussing individual cases with the view to mitigating the inconvenience to American interests it must be understood that the government of the United States reserves all of its rights under international law and is not to be understood as accepting any principle of interference with bona fide neutral trade.

Considerable attention was given to the difficulties caused to American importers by the blockade on German exports, the State Department said, with the Allies recognizing that "hard cases" had resulted and giving assurances of "every desire to redress such grievances where their genuine character is proved."

The Allies agreed "to reexamine those applications of American importers (to import German goods) on which unfavorable decisions have been given," and for the future to accept, through British or French consular offices, applications for exemption from the blockade of "categories of goods which afford matter for special consideration and are unobtainable elsewhere than in Germany."

Hardships Are Stressed

American officials stressed, in the talks, the hardships imposed on American producers of the goods whose importation by the Allies has been stopped. The Allies responded by pointing to the actual large increases in total purchases of American goods including fighting materials, and "stated that there is every expectation that the total amount of imports from the United States into their countries will continue to increase."

Regarding farm and other products, the buying of which has been curtailed or stopped, "the French and British representatives assured the American representatives that every effort would be made by their respective governments to maintain their purchases of these American products at as high a level as is compatible with the circumstances in which they are placed."

Considerable importance was attached to announcement that "the whole question of French and British purchases of American commodities will continue to be the subject of discussions in Paris, London and Washington."

Officials Are Satisfied

Greatest official satisfaction here, perhaps, was felt over the assurances that the Allies are determined after the war to "return to liberal commercial policies" in full accord with the reciprocal trade agreements program being sponsored by Secretary of State Hull.

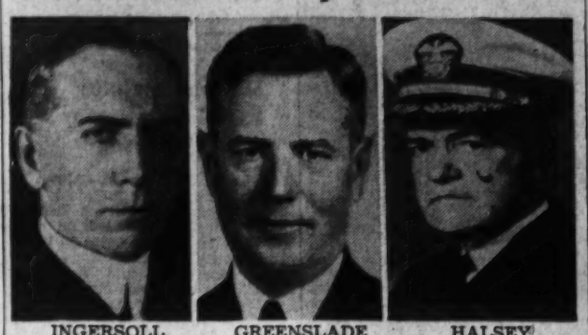
The statement said:

"As regards the long-term trade policies of the French and British governments, the representatives of the French and the British embassies stated categorically that the restrictive measures rendered necessary by the war were of an entirely temporary character and that at the earliest possible moment the French and British governments would return to liberal commercial policies based on the principle of the progressive reduction of trade barriers and to world trade conducted on a multilateral basis.

"They stressed the fact that the long-term commercial objectives of France and Great Britain are in full accord with the trade agreements program which has been in progress in the United States since 1934. In this connection the British representatives renewed the assurance given by Prime Minister Chamberlain in a speech on January 31, 1940, to the effect that the British government had no intention whatever of using restrictions which it has been compelled to impose upon imports from the United States for the purpose of altering permanent channels of trade and that it intends as soon as may be possible to return to its normal peacetime commercial policy as laid down in the trade agreement between the two countries.

"The French representatives drew attention to public statements of M. Eduard Daladier and M. Paul Reynaud in favor of a speedy return to a sound economic policy."

Score of Rear Admirals Shift Commands in Key Positions



INGERSOLL GREENSLADE HALSEY

6 to Retire; Halsey to Lead Aircraft; Greenslade to Be Chairman of Board, Ingersoll Assistant Operations Chief

The Navy last night announced a series of shifts in commands of key posts afloat and ashore, involving more than a score of ranking rear admirals.

The transfers, effective in the summer and fall, were officially described as routine, and largely necessitated by the retirement then of six rear admirals for age.

Principal posts affected were:

Rear Admiral William F. Halsey, jr., now commander of Aircraft Carrier Division 1, to be commander of Battle Force Aircraft, top aerial command of the Navy, in June. He will relieve Vice Admiral Charles A. Blakely, who comes ashore to become commandant of the Eleventh Naval District and the San Diego operating base. Halsey will be promoted to vice admiral.

Greenslade Advanced

Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade will succeed Rear Admiral Walton R. Sexton in October as chairman of the Navy General Board, when the latter retires. Greenslade is now a member of that body.

Rear Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, commander Cruiser Division 6, to be assistant chief of naval operations in August, as successor to Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, who will become commander of Cruiser Division 8.

Other changes directed were:

Rear Admiral Arthur L. Bristol, commander of Patrol Wing 2, Aircraft Scouting Force, to command Carrier Division 1 in June.

Capt. Aubrey W. Fitch, who is scheduled for promotion to rear admiral, and until recently was commandant of the naval air station, Pensacola, Fla., to succeed Admiral Bristol in May.

Rear Adm. Charles S. Freeman, from duty with the General Board here to be commandant of the thirteenth naval district and Puget Sound, Wash., navy yard, in August.

Rear Adm. David M. LeBreton, a student at the Naval War College, to command cruiser division 6 in June.

Rear Adm. John D. Wainwright, member of the General Board, to be commandant of the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard in June.

Rear Adm. John W. Wilcox, jr., commander of the Special Service Squadron, to be president of the board of inspection and survey here, effective in September.

Capt. Henry K. Hewitt, who is now in charge of the Puget Sound ammunition depot and on the promotion list for rear admiral, to be commander of the Special Service Squadron in August.

Capt. Frederick L. Reichmuth, captain of the Navy Yard here, who is due for advancement to rear admiral next month, to attend the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

Retiring Officers Named

Officers scheduled for retirement, besides Rear Admiral Sexton, are Rear Admiral Joseph R. Defrees, commandant, Eleventh Naval district, July 1; Rear Admiral Edward B. Fenner, commandant, Thirteenth Naval district, September 1; Rear Admiral Henry E. Lackey, president, general court martial, New York, July 1; Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole, commandant, Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard, July 1; Rear Admiral Harry L. Brinser, president, board of inspection and survey, December 1.

Sailing of Rex Reported Deferred

Copyright by New York Times

New York, April 26.—Two private code messages received here today from businessmen in Switzerland stated that the sailing of the Italian liner Rex from Genoa and Naples next week "had been indefinitely delayed." The liner was scheduled to arrive in New York May 9.

The Associated Press later quoted Italo E. Verrando, director of the Italian Line in New York, as calling the reports the "usual bunk."

U. S. Leads World In Commerce With Argentina

New York, April 26 (AP).—A "virtual cessation" of German imports has helped lift the United States far in front of other nations supplying Argentina, according to cable advices to the Argentine Information Bureau released today.

United States exports to Argentina in the first three months of the year had a tariff value of 81,437,751 pesos (about $25,000,000 at official rates), compared with 44,178,614 pesos in the first three months of 1939. German exports to the South American nation contracted to 5,627,648 pesos from 34,467,745 last year.

Incidentally, the Commerce Department yesterday reported that the stimulus of war had sent American exports 51 per cent ahead of last year. During the first quarter of 1940, the report said, exports have exceeded imports by $410,349,000—or almost half of the favorable trade balance of $859,000,000 recorded for all of 1939.

The most notable export gains were in airplanes, iron and steel products, other manufactured goods, nonferrous metals, lubricants, metalworking machinery, motor trucks, tractors and chemicals.

The total value of exports for the first quarter was placed at $1,068,773,000 as against $699,408,000 last year. Imports advanced 23 per cent to $658,424,000. The 1939 total for the period was $526,798,000.

Liner Queen Mary Reported at Capetown

New York, April 26 (AP).—The British liner Queen Mary, which left New York March 21 for an unannounced destination, sailed into Capetown, South Africa, April 2, passengers and officers of the Javanese steamer Poelau Tello said today on their arrival from Capetown.

The $25,000,000 superliner was escorted by three British destroyers, they said.

Allies Pour In Around Trondheim

D'Alpines into lines near Steinkjer, 50 miles above Trondheim.

Fighting flared there today in brief contacts of German and Allied patrols in fog, but British reported there was no major action. At Narvik, isolated, German-held port in the north, which is another Allied goal, the British reported "all quiet."

South of Dombas, connected by rail with the Allied landing point of Andalsnes and with Trondheim and Oslo, the advancing Germans were supported by artillery, tanks and strafing aircraft.

There was a report that the British and Norwegians had checked the other German column to the east in the Osterdalen (eastern valley) after a furious engagement.

Norwegian guerrillas were believed to have dynamited bridges and demolished roads in the Osterdalen in the German pathway, while small units harried the Nazis' supporting column and communications near Roros.

Army Opposes War Dictator, Johnson Says

Plans for Industry Based on American Way, Official Asserts

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said yesterday that the War Department's plan for mobilization of industry in war are predicated on maintenance of "the established American way of getting things done."

Making plain that creation of a war-time dictatorship over business has no place in Army plans, Johnson said the industrial mobilization program opposes Government ownership or operations of railroads.

He spoke at the dedication in Union Station here of a bronze tablet commemorating the services of the Railroad War Board of 1917, an organization of rail executives which ran the railroads for eight months in the World War before the Government took over operations.

The rail carriers, Johnson said, are "better prepared to meet a military emergency" than they were in 1917-18, and added that the War Department has "full confidence in the innate capacity, in the cooperative spirit, in the ability and in the patriotism of our railroads to cope successfully with the transportation problems that any grave military emergency would involve."

Miss Barbara Baird, of Marshall, Va., granddaughter of Fairfax Harrison, chairman of the Railroad War Board, which functioned from April 11 to December 28, 1917, unveiled the plaque. Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and one of the two surviving members of the board, told of its creation by the railroads at the outbreak of war.

families of unemployed employables who are not now eligible for relief.

The social welfare delegation included Mrs. Olive W. Swinney and Dorsey W. Hyde, of the Washington Council of Social Welfare Agencies; the Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities; George Cleary, of the St. Vincent de Paul Society; Leifur Magnussin, of the Monday Evening Club, and Sam J. Sugar, of the Jewish Social Service Agency.

The delegation asked increased personnel in the public assistance division and removal of the 10 per cent limitation on administrative expenses.

Another social welfare group, comprising Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Mrs. Paul H. Appleby and Mrs. Francis M. Walters, asked for more case workers, removal of the 10 per cent limitation and aid for unemployed employables.

Mrs. Appleby also requested that the welfare department child welfare recommendations be put into effect at a cost of $250,000, that 10 foster homes be provided instead of the 2 carried in the House bill.

Mrs. Walters asked more vocational school teachers, additional money for fuel in the schools and location of Abbott School at Brentwood Park, and indorsed the nonresident tuition prohibition with exemption allowed children of military officers.

Hygiene Bureau Sought

Mrs. Robert A. McGee, of the Washington Council of Social Agencies, and Ray Everett, of the Social Hygiene Society, recommended $5,000 additional for education on venereal diseases and $10,000 for establishment of a mental hygiene bureau.

The Rev. Harry Porter asked dental facilities and an elevator at the Southwest health center and a site for a Northwest health center and suggested that the old Jefferson High School grounds be turned into a playground.

A. W. Lee, of Randle Highland Citizens Association, asked $15,000 for a branch library site in Anacostia and an increase in police in the Eleventh Precinct.

Arthur J. Sundlum, of the Keystone Automobile Club, urged the subcommittee to restore the Scott Circle underpass and asked additional appropriations for traffic lights and snow removal.

School Addition Desired

Henry L. Coleman, of the American University Park Citizens Association, asked for a school site in American University Park, while H. J. Clay, of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, asked for a 10-room addition to the Taft Junior High School.

J. L. Glebman, of the Congress Heights Citizens Association, indorsed a House item for a junior high school in the vicinity of Seventeenth annd Q streets southeast. Weston R. Clark, of the Guidance and Personnel Association, indorsed estimates for two additional vocational guidance teachers.

Mrs. B. G. McIlwee, of the Roosevelt High School Parent-Teacher Association, recommended the creation of a landscape division for beautification of school grounds and an increase in the appropriation for school gardens.

A folklore conference, open to the public, will open at the Harrington Hotel at 10 a. m. today. Among discussion subjects are minors' songs, Missouri River folklore, Negro folk tales, Finnish folk songs, Kentucky mountain ballads and North Carolina dances.

Speakers at yesterday's conference included the Rev. Denis Mooney, O. F. M., of the Franciscan Monastery; Miss Marjorie Edgar, Marine on St. Croix, Minn.; John H. Matheson, Duluth, Minn.; Will E. Ayer, Putney, Vt.; Miss Margaret Valiant, National Youth Administration; Dr. Remington Kellogg, United States National Museum, and Ralph Page, Munsonville, N. H. Sammy Spring's group from Otis, Mass., gave a square dance demonstration at the meeting.

Drive Opened To Cut Roosevelt Money Powers

By the Associated Press

Republicans launched an unexpected attack on President Roosevelt's monetary powers yesterday, using as a vehicle the Administration's bill to clarify Executive powers to "freeze" Danish and Norwegian credits in this country.

Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, proposed an amendment which would repeal the emergency authority given the President to require the licensing of transactions by American citizens in foreign exchange, gold and silver. The amendment would leave intact the executive control over transactions by foreigners.

He also offered an amendment to terminate on May 1, 1941, the broad monetary powers given to the President in 1933 under which the country's financial institutions were closed during the banking crisis.

Danaher told reporters he had "no illusions" as to the possibility of obtaining Senate approval of the amendment.

The Administration's bill will come up for consideration Monday.

Charles G. Raddish, Boston Newsman, Dies

Charles Gerald Raddish, Boston newspaperman, formerly of Washington, was buried in Arlington Cemetery yesterday. He was an overseas veteran of the World War.

Mr. Raddish was born March 19, 1899, in Boston. Following his war service he came to Washington, and from 1921 to 1926 was a member of The Washington Post editorial staff. Then he returned to Boston.

He leaves three brothers, Michael, Thomas and Edward Raddish, all of Boston.

Bridges Defends J. Edgar Hoover

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Mexico, told the Senate yesterday that J. Edgar Hoover and his Federal Bureau of Investigation "have been the subject of an intensive 'smear' campaign." Saying that rumors have circulated that "New Dealers" are "using radical elements" to "get" Hoover, Bridges added:

"With wars going on all over the world it seems to me this is a poor time to go trafficking in politics with the avowed purpose of purging some of the personnel of the nation's greatest law enforcement agency."

Arkansas Boy, Festival Star, Says Singing Is Just a Gift

Billy Hill strums a big guitar

He Plays Guitar, Banjo and Violin, All by Ear; Has Own Radio Program In Memphis, Shows Great Stage Poise

After Billy Hill, 12, who sings above his guitar at the National Folk Festival, had brought down the house yesterday under the whoops particularly of the children, he was asked backstage how he does it.

"I didn't learn to sing; it's a natural gift. God gave it to me. I was just born that way."

Back home, in Earle, Arkansas, where Billy is sponsored by the Rotary Club and all the other citizens, he is looked on as the pride of the State. He won top honors in a folk festival there and was sent here to the National Festival.

He goes on his own radio program in Memphis. He broadcasted over the Mutual System here Thursday and over a national network yesterday. The radio audiences just hear his voice and guitar, or his violin or banjo, as he chooses. It's his stage poise that has helped make him an outstanding attraction at the festival.

Constitution Hall is a big place, but he walked out to its stage yesterday, strumming and singing as if in his own back yard. It's all by heart—just natural singing and playing, he insists.

He's been told what ambition is, and some day "wants a big job singing and playing."

Ickes Again Scolds Garner Backers

ances from the President that he would not give his sanction to the Texas movement for his nomination.

Subsequently Roosevelt movement leaders in Texas queried another close friend of Garner, House Majority Leader Rayburn. Seeking to stem the growing rift, Rayburn publicly attested his loyalty to the President and the New Deal, but urged Texas to indorse its native son, Garner, for the nomination.

Fanning the controversy was a statement issued by E. B. Germany and Clara Driscoll, co-managers for Garner, after the Wisconsin primaries. They jointly proclaimed the third-term issue "dead."

Angered by the editorial "carpet bagger" reference, Ickes said Carter never thought of calling him that when he formerly went to Texas bearing "rich gifts." And he charged that "you and your associates sent 'carpet-baggers' into Wisconsin and Illinois prior to the recent primaries in those States."

The two Texas Senators and most members of the House Lone Star delegation declined comment on the Ickes letter, although most of these admitted receiving copies. "Amon can take care of himself; let him reply," said one prominent Texan.

Other political developments:

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, confirmed reports by his friends that under no circumstances would he accept the Vice Presidential nomination. "I would rather be Senator from Montana," said Wheeler.

Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, a candidate for Governor, challenged former Gov. H. G. Kump of that State to disclose to Senate Campaign Committee investigators all information "concerning the present amount of the slush fund that the '2 per cent clubs' have extorted from the State employes during the last six or seven months."

Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, proposed a constitutional amendment to prevent reelection of a President to a third term. In the Senate, Holt has threatened to call up a resolution placing that chamber on record against a third term.

Addressing Indiana Republican editors in Indianapolis, Franklyn Waltman, publicity director of the Republican National Committee, charged New Dealers had launched a "smearing" attack on the Republican Party, and promised Republican retaliation. He said this year's campaign "may become one of the nastiest in recent years." New Deal smear attacks, he charged, are designed "to distract from the facts of their failure."

Investment Trusts Offer Control Plan

Bunker Says Group's Proposals 'Take Care Of All Abuses'

By the Associated Press

Representatives of twenty-five major investment trusts submitted to a Senate banking subommittee yesterday joint recommendations for Federal regulation of their business.

The proposals, incorporating many provisions contained in pending legislation drafted by the Securities Commission, were presented on behalf of the group by Arthur H. Bunker of New York, executive vice president of the Lehman Corporation.

Bunker expressed the opinion that the group's suggestions would "take care of all the abuses" discussed during the four weeks' hearings which ended with Bunker's presentation.

Subjects Covered

"Specifically," Bunker said, "these provisions cover the subjects of independent directors; overnight changes in management; dumping of securities by interested parties, and self-dealing; changes of fundamental policies which are to be prohibited without stockholders' approval; abuses in the distribution of investment company securities, including dilution of the equity of existing stockholders; full publicity and disclosure to stockholders in periodic reports; proper advices as to source of dividends; proxy control; the establishment of accounting standards, and provisions for complete audits.

"All of these will be accomplished in a simple manner with administrative discretion reduced to that minimum required for flexibility. Certainty takes the place of uncertainty in the bill now before you.

"Our proposals do not attempt the impossible. They are not so drastic and so complex that they can be made workable only by vast delegations of power."

Offers U. S. Cooperation

Bunker added that the elements of the business for which he spoke would cooperate with the committee in writing specific amendments to the bill and would endeavor "to bring into agreement those members of our own industry who would be affected by the legislation, and to whom we have not yet communicated these suggestions."

He expressed belief that the proposals would accomplish the main objectives of the pending legislation.

Bunker proposed the elimination of a half-dozen major sections of the bill, which now contains 209 sections, and revision of a number of others.

The German Usurper

President Roosevelt has proclaimed that "a state of war unhappily exists between Germany and Norway," simultaneously invoking all the neutrality restrictions applicable against both countries under the law.

While seemingly a purely pro forma action the issuance of these various executive orders is not without a certain diplomatic significance. And it is not in the German interest.

The Nazi ambition, fulfilled in the case of Denmark, was to make both that country and Norway protectorates of the Reich. The underlying idea was evidently to gain all the advantages of conquest without assuming any of the costs. The German plan, had it gone through intact, would have given Berlin a claim to at least indirect control over the foreign credits and the merchant marine of both Scandinavian countries.

By proclaiming a state of war between Germany and Norway, and thereby tacitly defining the former country as the aggressor, the President has blocked many of the advantages which the Nazis undoubtedly hoped to achieve through their coup.

The Norwegian government resisting the German conquest is now not merely recognized as a belligerent power but also as the government whose actions will be respected as official by the United States. All proclamations or edicts issued under the oversight of the German military authorities in Oslo are thereby defined as the acts of usurpers.

Cash balances and tangible property held by Denmark, as well as by Norway, in the country were "frozen" by an earlier executive order. So there is no likelihood of Germany acquiring the dollar exchange which was perhaps anticipated as part of the loot of Scandinavia.

The current proclamations, while bearing equally on Norway and Germany, further insure that the policy of the United States will be to discourage recognition of any gain by the Reich resulting from its flagrant assault on Scandinavia.

Campaign Fund Probes

The scandals that arose over the political exploitation of relief workers in 1938 directed public attention to another evil of long standing—the solicitation of political contributions from Federal employes.

While the Federal Corrupt Practices Act has forbidden such activities for many years, the practice has continued for the simple reason that, apart from a few large contributors, officeholders provide the only important source of income that can be regularly tapped. Moreover, there are many ways of putting pressure upon Federal employes to make so-called "voluntary" contributions to campaign funds, without resorting to direct solicitation.

Passage of the Hatch Act has increased the pressure for stricter observance of the Corrupt Practices Act. An increased sensitiveness to abuses is revealed by the promptness with which the Senate Special Campaign Investigating Committee has responded to complaints of primary irregularities in five States.

Charges by defeated candidates in primary contests are based, in some instances, on allegedly excessive expenditures and in other cases on improper use of funds and exercise of official pressure in connection with both Senatorial contests and selection of delegates to party conventions. Senator Gillette reports that his committee has received no reports of political activity in the WPA, but is concentrating upon the solicitation of funds from Federal workers on behalf of Senators to whom they owe their jobs.

As the provisions of the Hatch Act gradually eliminate political activities by patronage jobholders, evils of this sort should disappear. But the problem of financing campaigns will remain. The difficulties of paying the legitimate expenses of contests will have to be faced and there is danger that the candidate with limited means and no rich private backers will be increasingly handicapped as contributions from public officeholders are cut off.

The remedy, of course, does not lie in any relaxation of essential prohibitions designed to protect officeholders from exploitation. But the loud complaints of excessively lavish outlays in some of the primary contests suggest that it may become necessary for the Federal Government to set strict limits to the amount of expenditures in the primaries as is now done in campaigns for election to House and Senate.

Such limitations would be not only a protection against corrupt practices, but a means of giving the candidate with less financial backing an even break in a contest for votes.

Confused Procedure

Three bills are now before the House carrying amendments to the Wages and Hours Act—the Norton bill, the Ramspeck bill, and the Barden bill. The extraordinary procedure by which the latter, the most controversial of the three measures, was brought to the floor of the House precipitated a heated debate on Thursday in which little attention was paid to the merits of the proposal.

Representative Cox, of Georgia, who is leading the fight for the Barden bill, made no secret of his hostility to the regulatory principle of the Wages and Hours Act. "I cannot conceive of a worse mistake," he said, "than the thrusting of Federal power into the activities of the people as is done by this law. You seek to regiment, you seek to regulate, a relationship that should forever be kept free."

Admitting that he was opposed to any law setting a uniform wage scale for the entire country, Mr. Cox charged that the businessmen of the industrial East were responsible for enactment of the law because they hoped it would kill off competition from the South and West.

Of course there is more than a modicum of truth in charges that sectional self-interest played a large part in saddling the country with the rigid minimum-wage provisions of the present act. But that does not justify amendments instigated by other selfish sectional interests to exempt from the act large groups of low-paid workers in need of protection against exploitation.

Mr. Cox is obviously not interested in making the wages and hours law more workable, with a view to eventual achievement of its major objectives of raising living standards and improving working conditions in the South as elsewhere. In advocating the Barden bill he is espousing discriminatory exemptions from the provisions of the wages and hours law. And, judging from the sweeping character of his attack upon the law, he regards the Barden bill as an entering wedge which may open the way for further extensive exemptions.

It is evident that no constructive, well-balanced plan for revising the wages and hours law can possibly emerge from the present confusion. The House has its choice of three revisionist bills. And it may amend at will any one of the three in any way it chooses. Not one of these bills undertakes to do a thorough job of overhauling the existing law and it is virtually certain that any attempt to amend them from the floor will only introduce fresh complications.

Under the circumstances, President Roosevelt's appeal for postponement of plans for amendment to next year should be heeded. By that time, as he says, "we shall know a great deal more about the subject." Meanwhile, the Wage-Hour Division will have had opportunity to strengthen its administrative machinery and should be in position to offer good advice as to how to make the law more practical and easier of enforcement.

Taxes On Property

The National Real Estate Conference, which has been holding meetings in Washington, has decided to launch a country-wide crusade against high property taxes.

There is no doubt that in many communities taxes on real estate have become excessively burdensome. As one speaker stated, they have been levied on property "in a cumulative manner without regard to income or value and without serious effort to shift unjust burdens to other forms of wealth."

The remedy for this situation is not to be found in placing statutory limits on tax rates and local indebtedness, as has been done by a number of States. In some cases, as one of the conference speakers pointed out, such restrictions may help to reduce the scale of spending or force a community to resort to other forms of taxation. But, as experience here in the District has shown, it is easier to extract a little more out of the property owner than to tap new sources of income in the form of sales taxes or similar levies

Furthermore, tax limitations are certain to be evaded if put too low. Limits on tax rates mean little when the appraised value of taxable property can be raised at need to offset lower rates.

The basic causes of the heavy load of taxation borne by real estate are twofold. First and foremost, the mounting volume of public expenditure. Secondly, the tax system itself. Property is now forced to carry a too-heavy proportion of the load of local taxation. There should be greater diversification. Furthermore, levies on capital value without regard to income entail great hardship upon property owners when for any reason income from their holdings cease.

The problem of property taxation, in short, is only one aspect of the much larger problems of taxation presented by the existence of Federal, State and local taxing units, all tapping the same sources of income and reaching the same property owners. There is need for a better balance from top to bottom of the tax structure and, above all, there is need for economizing in public outlays, if the tax burden is to be kept within tolerable limits.

Test Of Air Power

Even without her vast superiority in the air Germany would sooner or later have succeeded in overrunning Poland. As against the Polish forces, the German army had the advantage of greater numbers, better training, finer equipment and infinitely better staff work. The Reich's unchallenged supremacy in the air only made Polish defeat inevitable and hastened it.

A much more decisive test of air power is that now provided by the fighting in Norway. There the Germans so far seem to have command of the air. The Allies, on the other hand, unquestionably enjoy superiority in sea power and have exerted it to effect substantial landings of troops on the Norwegian coast. Yet, as shown by recent British reverses, sea power alone will not determine the outcome.

If the Allies are to win in Norway they must somehow find a way to offset German air power. Because of their command over the Norwegian airports the Germans have been able to reinforce and supply their garrisons even as far north as Narvik. They have apparently made it difficult for Allied naval units to land at convenient places. And they appear to have created extraordinary difficulties in the way of an Allied advance on the key city of Trondheim.

Unless the balance can somehow be righted by the more effective and extensive use of Allied air power, the expeditionary force in Norway will face grave difficulties. Nor does it appear sufficient for Great Britain to conduct repeated raids on German-held air fields in Norway and Denmark. For in possession of the shorter lines, Germany by use of its air arm is in a position to reply in kind, while at the same time bombing Allied transports, harassing forces on the march, destroying their communication lines and preventing liaison between various units.

The air arm does not operate in a vacuum. It is under modern conditions the indispensable supplement to both military and naval power. Without it either military or naval power alone may not be enough to insure victory. That is why airplane production and the supply of skilled flyers are now of paramount importance to the Allies.

Good Appointment

The selection of George D. Neilson to serve as a judge of the Police Court is in line with the promotion of former District Attorney David A. Pine to the District bench, and with the designation of Judge Edward M. Curran as district attorney. In each case competent and experienced men were advanced to new responsibilities.

Mr. Neilson has made an excellent record as an assistant corporation counsel since 1934. During a large part of the six years he has held this office he has been assigned to prosecutions in the Police Court. So he is thoroughly familiar with the procedure of that court, the nature of the cases it handles and the law which it enforces.

While Mr. Neilson is only 33 years of age, his abundant experience in this field will probably balance the more seasoned judgment of older men. He is known to his colleagues as a conscientious worker who has a broad knowledge of the law and who has already demonstrated a high degree of judicial temperament.

Considered together with other recent apointments, Mr. Neilson's advancement indicates that President Roosevelt is making a real effort to strengthen the District's machinery of law enforcement.

The Congressional Library

From the Hartford Courant

Although the House Committee on Appropriations had many compliments for Archibald MacLeish, head of the Congressional Library, it refused to allow him the money he asked for. It had "faith in Mr. MacLeish as an administrator," which is more than it has said about many Government officials, but it still could not give him a large enough appropriation to increase the salaries of his staff or to make the desired additions to the personnel.

No one will deny that a library is an important part of every republic, both in its preservation of the nation's literary traditions and as the laboratory for future scholars. But libraries do not bring in votes. It is not quite the same as spending a few million dollars on a commission or an agency that can be counted on to break into the headlines, because libraries are comparatively quiet institutions, making little news. Apparently Congress is willing to economize—in any direction that will make no difference in November.

Cure For Unemployment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The most persistently discussed national problem of our day is "Unemployment." Many claim it can never be fully solved. This is no reason for ceasing to seek an answer. The very definite needs for solution are imagination, courage, altruism, and nation-wide co-operation.

With the exercise of these acknowledged American traits, we can lift ourselves out of the depths of unemployment by our very bootstraps. The formula proposed may be considered preposterous. But critics thought likewise of a certain westward ocean voyage in 1492.

Let us assume that there are 50,000,000 employed and 10,000,000 unemployed of all types. These unemployed obviously are able to purchase little or nothing of either the essentials or luxuries of life. Consequently the volume of business and profit is only about five-sixths of what it would be if all were employed.

Now let every employer add one additional worker in the various levels of employment for every five workers now employed. Presto. The unemployed are absorbed. Increased payrolls? Of course. Temporary losses? Maybe. The money? Banks are bursting with funds for business expansion.

And business would surely expand with approximately 10,000,000 revived customers putting into the channels of trade and industry practically every dollar of their pay for sorely needed commodities. Result? The "broken down merry-go-round" would turn again.

Of course all employers do not engage five workers. Then let the big fellows and some little ones practice a little more altruism and exceed the quota. This formula would not, of course, end all forms of unemployment, but it would make a long stride in that direction and probably raise the national income to and even above that much desired "eighty billion."

We have tried other and more costly experiments. We once fought a war "over there" to make the world safe for democracy. Let us designate a "zero hour" over here for another kind of pump-priming and make America safe for herself.

Origin Of "Baron"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of April 18 Mr. Seabury Quinn makes the bald statement that the title of "baron" originally meant a "simple or foolish man."

As a matter of fact, the word was derived from the Nordic language, the Gothic and Germanic words "vair," "varo" and "viro," including the Icelandic and Anglo-Saxon "ver" and old high German "wir" and "wer,' whence the Latin "vir." It meant "man" or "husband," in the sense of a freeman or landed person as distinguished from the less privileged persons of the tribe or nation

The transition to "baro" and "baron" was merely typical of various words. Certainly the French did not adopt the title in the sense of a simple or foolish man.

In view of the fact that the Nordic peoples, principally the Germans and Goths, very early entered the Roman armies and ultimately overran Roman territory, it may be that the Latin word "baro," meaning a dolt, was derived from the superimposed dialects and was first applied in derision of those foreigners who took over Roman estates.

Hence the title came from the fact of a man's owning an estate, being a freeman or free lord, rather than from the fact that the displaced Romans gave a new meaning of "dolt" in derision of him.

Profits Of War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Recent events in Norway are apparently having their effect upon American "neutrality." It has been easy enough for us, the United States, to pretend to be neutral between England and Germany in their fight for economic supremacy. But when Hitler exercises his alleged theory of Germanic racial superiority by "protecting" Denmark and Norway, and all the other neutral peoples wake up to the danger in remaining neutral, even the slow-to-anger, cosmopolitan American people begin to wonder whether the official neutrality of the American Government is safe.

We want to stay out of the world war for markets. Apparently, what we really mean to do is to keep the boys at home this time. But we want the Allies to win. It is probably safe to predict an awakening to see that we might help the Allies this time without an A. E. F. (After England Fails).

Mechanized warfare appears to require many more men behind the lines than at the front. Manpower is being conserved by a constantly increasing use of the machine. Modern science may easily make it unnecessary for us to send men, if we send machines.

History seldom repeats itself exactly. We can loan the Allies some of our idle money and write it off. Then we can supply them with all sorts of commodities except cannon fodder. Taking the surplus labor off the market and raising wages by the natural law of demand and supply will be extremely profitable. Consuming power will be increased and increased production will follow.

When labor is paid more, capital will get more, since labor both spends and makes its wages. We shall have another "new era." Money spent in going to war returns over 100 per cent per annum on the investment. The country makes what the Government spends. If we are smart enough and the war lasts long enough, we can double our national income again.

The American people made a lot of money in stopping the Kaiser. Probably we shall do it again and stop Hitler, and Stalin, too, if necessary. Let us hope we shall not delay too long.

Pressure For Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In my letter of a week ago I commented upon the right of the United States to demand peace, to lay before the people of the belligerent countries at the earliest possible date the specific terms of the peace we demand. Our attitude may not please the belligerent governments, but the people of the several countries will prefer peace in the interest of all concerned rather than continuation of the war.

Already groups of citizens of the United States are meeting to consider the economic and political bases of peace. Economic and political questions are interwoven, but the economic bases are the more fundamental, and if the proposals take into consideration the welfare of all concerned, the different governments will hardly be able to resist the pressure for peace. The people of every country scorched by the flames of war will regard such peace proposals as better than the death and destruction of war.

On Intervention

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

You will perhaps recall that in a letter to your paper last summer on the subject of the then pending repeal of the Arms Embargo contained in the Neutrality Act of 1937, this writer stated that the members of Congress who supported and advocated the embargo in 1935 and 1936 would most certainly stultify themselves by reversing their stand in the face of the European war which had just broken out, and would be defeated if they ran for reelection this fall. The defeat of Senator Burke, of Nebraska, in the recent primaries, and his statement regarding it, bear out the prediction of last summer.

The bland disregard by Congress of the pleas of thousands of voters that the embargo be retained as the best safeguard of the neutrality of its non-involvement in European quarrels, was as bold a slap in the face as the people of this country have ever received from its Government and Representatives in Congress. Senator Pittman, in a public statement, practically sneered at the thousands of letters received by Congress on the retention of the arms embargo and brazenly declared that they were not sent in good faith but were the work of organized groups acting for ulterior motives.

Congress ignored the pressure of public opinion and yielded to the pressure of groups whose identity and motives are still unknown to the majority of the people of the United States. They only know that the embargo was lifted, that the United States is becoming the munitions base of France and England, and that step by step this country is being eased to the brink of war without its citizens having any opportunity of voicing their wishes effectively.

I have concluded, and evidently a great many other people have also concluded, that pleading with our Congressmen on this issue is useless; that we are combating influences which are working behind the scenes and refuse to be drawn into open and honest debate; and that the only recourse of the people at a time like this is to go to the polls in November and vote against the party which, since the administration of Woodrow Wilson, has stood for intervention and war in Europe.

Without Mercy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

What a dreadful and ironical contribution to Be-Kind-to-Animals Week it is to read in this morning's Post that a flock of 60 or 70 goats, "which of all animals suffer most like men," are to be sacrificed "for sweet science's sake" in United States Army tests of oxygen bombs.

And this decision is made over the protests of humane societies in a Nation that prides itself upon being humane and civilized.

If men must make their diabolical inventions does not common decency and a sense of fair play bid them refrain from making victims of pitiful, defenseless animals?

Is there any assurance that these poor creatures will be killed instantaneously and painlessly, or be spared a death of hideous agonies?

If human beings are capable of crimes such as these against helpless lower animals, I have one plea to make to those that write and speak the English language.

Please do not use the words barbarous or beastly when what is meant is cruel or savage, for what so-called "lower animal" is capable of the deliberate, calculated, heartless cruelties of that "higher" animal, man?

According to the Gospel of St. Luke, Jesus gave to his followers this admonition, "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful, and your Apostle James follows with this warning, "For he shall have judgment without mercy that hath showed no mercy."

How do human beings without mercy in their own hearts expect to find mercy?

Walt Whitman's Garbage

"A strangely impudent agitation has just been started with regard to what is called 'Walt Whitman's Actual American Position,'" wrote the Saturday Review in its issue of March 18, 1876. "Whitman, it may be explained, is an American writer who some years back attracted attention by a volume of so-called poems . . ."

The so-called poems, of course, were "Leaves of Grass," published first in 1855, 21 years before the Saturday Review's blast. It was not the first attack nor the last on the sadly misnamed Good Gray Poet. But most of the censure had come from highly moral sources, shocked and outraged by Whitman's alleged immorality.

The Review still had plenty to say about this side of Whitman's work: ". . . so-called poems . . . chiefly remarkable for their absurd extravagance and shameless obscenity . . ." But, and the Review expands with proper satisfaction, "He has been little heard of among decent people. It now appears that, although there is a small coterie of persons in this country who are not ashamed to confess their liking for Whitman's nastiness, his own countrymen have universally repudiated him."

"No doubt," the Review went on, adding literary to moral censure, "the present effort to revive curiosity on the subject will be a useful advertisement to any bookseller who happens to have a stock of Whitman's garbage on hand."

Whitman, an aging paralytic, was living in comparative poverty in a little house in Camden, N. J., his Washington days, when his muse had sung its purest democracy, long since ended. He corresponded frequently with Peter Doyle, the street car operator who was his friend, and other comrades in Washington. But when he wrote "Lave subtly with your waters every line, Potomac!" it was nostalgically the cry of an "old tongue, still uttering, still ejaculating, canst never cease this babble."

The Review found it worse than babble.

"There would indeed need to be a very remarkable change both in the moral and intellectual institution of educated people before such writings as those of Whitman could be accepted as, in any sense, honest literature."

Whitman was having a hard time, there was no doubt of it. The Review spoke not only for a moral America, it spoke for most of what there was of a literate America. The New England poets, complacent in their own acclaim, snubbed the "turbulent, fleshy, sensual, eating, drinking and breeding" self-styled "kosmos." Walt's repeated attempts to secure a small income by writing for the magazines during his illness were utter failures.

"The Atlantic will not touch him. His offerings to Scribner are returned with insulting notes." Harper's did fall from grace and print a couple of his pieces, "but imperative orders from headquarters have stopped anything further."

But there were Answerers, a few in the bold new land Whitman spoke for, and many in the old where his songs of democracy rekindled hope in the ways of freedom.

Robert Buchanan, a minor English poet, had first provoked the Saturday Review's attack by a spirited defense of Whitman as a great poet worthy of the love and acclaim not only of his fellow-countrymen but of the world. It is perhaps the English poet's chief claim to distinction.

But what angered the Review more than anything else was Buchanan's argument that his countrymen owed Whitman an obligation, that they should support him because he was a man of genius . . .

How the Review tore into that! With all the fury and thrifty righteousness of a Congressman attacking the Federal Writers' Projects, it revealed the specious lie.

Are we to rush public support to every scribbling fool who imagines himself a genius? it asked derisively. Then we shall all be bankrupt. And, in a passage much too long to quote, it cited Whitman as one of those poor deluded souls whose claims to "genius" was enough to discourage any public benefactor from wasting his money on artistic poseurs. And then the Review allowed itself a complacent prophecy:

"The plan proposed is to help him circulate his writings, and this implies approval of them. It is satisfactory to believe that agitation for such a purpose is likely to prove as futile as it is audacious."

That seemed a pretty safe judgment in the year 1875.

The "barbaric yawp" had fallen on unhearing ears, accustomed to the mannered music of the New Englanders, soothed by a lyrical escapism that took no thought of the stirrings of the masses. The "barbaric yawp" had cost him his livelihood. The Department of the Interior had no use for the "notorious" author of the "Leaves of Grass." Secretary Harlan had fired him from his clerkship when he discovered his identity ten years before.

But Walt knew. Perhaps that was his genius. His superb, unconquerable conviction of the power, the prophecy, the truth, the majesty, the greatness of the songs that came from his pen. Yet he was not completely the egotist. It was not his song, but the song of all mankind—liberated.

Washington today is more Whitman's Washington than ever: a democratic refuge, imperfect but progressing, from the terrors and decadence of an enslaved world. Symbol of the new spirit of freedom in man. Whitman, too, had cast off the chains of habit. Like Lincoln, whom he loved, Walt was something of a New Dealer.

The Review was right—for 1875. But with the emergence, slow and tortuous, of the masses, Whitman, too, emerged. He was not so far away now. In the mists of the future new democracies glimpsed his vision.

"Solitary, singing in the West, I strike up for a New World."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Death Of A Theory

LESS THAN a year ago, to be exact on May 11, 1939, the late Senator Borah issued a statement which needs to be reprinted today. The text in full is as follows:

When I read of the four nations—Norway, Denmark, Finland and Sweden—saying to Hitler, and in effect to the world, that "we are going to be neutral and run our own business in our own way," I cannot but believe that it will afford some comfort, and possibly some courage, to people in this country who think we cannot keep out of war, that we cannot be neutral, and that we cannot have our own national policy.

When we think of these nations, situated as they are, revealing the foresight and the courage which they have done heretofore and which they are doing again, it ought to be helpful to us who kowtow to the demands and policies of other nations.

We should not have so very much trouble in outlining a safe, sound and neutral policy if it were not for the fact that we seem to be constantly concerned about what we shall do, or what we ought to do, with reference to the affairs of other nations.

I venture to say there are some neutrality bills which never would be offered, or, at least, never would have the slightest chance of consideration, if it were not because these neutrality bills were supposed to be of very great interest to certain other nations.

The real reason why these nations are successful in their effort to take care of their own interests and maintain their own policies is because they are not trying to play power politics. But the Government of the United States cannot divorce itself apparently from the great desire to play power politics, to become a factor in the power politics of Europe.

THIS STATEMENT would have no particular importance now if it were merely one more example of a prophecy confounded by events. But Senator Borah's confident conviction that the Scandinavian countries would remain at peace was not the kind of error that anyone might make if he were trying to estimate the chances of, let us say, an invasion of Holland or of Italian intervention in the war or of Japanese action in the Dutch East Indies. Predictions of this sort depend upon a knowledge of hidden facts and upon inferences. The most seasoned diplomats and journalistic observers can do no better than to estimate the probabilities.

Senator Borah's prediction was of a wholly different sort. It did not rest upon a careful study of the position of the Scandinavian countries but upon a theory: the theory that no matter what their position, no matter what the policies of their neighbors, these four Scandinavian countries would be safe because they were walking the one and only, the straight and the narrow, path of peace.

They were safe, he felt sure, from the scourage of war, not because they were well armed and united and supported by strong neighbors but because each of them stood absolutely alone and was not concerned with "the affairs of other nations." It was Senator Borah's profound life-long conviction that this is "the real reason why these nations are successful" in staying out of war. For he believed that war comes not from aggression but from entanglement, that it is not the aggressors abroad who drive a country to war but the misguided, meddlesome warmongers at home.

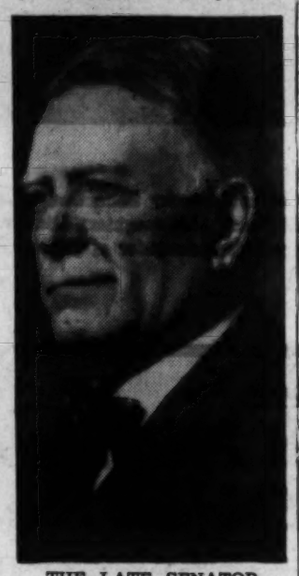
Had not the Danes, the Norwegians and the Swedes practiced an isolationist policy successfully in the war of 1914-1918, though they were right on the edge of the war, whereas, we at a distance of 3,000 miles had allowed ourselves to become entangled by selling arms, giving credits, and listening to British propaganda? Did this not prove that the Scandinavians had discovered the secret of how to remain at peace?

NO ONE, I THINK, will say that the Scandinavians have not followed to the bitter end the isolationist policy which Senator Borah commended so warmly as a model to all the world. The interesting question, then, is why Scandinavian isolationism was successful in 1914-1918 and a terrible disaster in 1939-1940. In both wars they have followed the same line of policy: in the first war they were safe and made money and in the second war they are a battlefield and are ruined. Something is radically different, and that something is certainly not their own policy. It must be something different in the situation around them, in "the affairs of other nations" which, according to Senator Borah, they were wise to ignore.

Their situation this time has been radically different. Then, Russia was at war with Germany: had the Kaiser invaded Scandinavia he would have collided not only with the British and French coming from western Norway but with the Russians coming from Finland and Sweden and the Baltic Sea. Now, Russia and Germany are temporary partners, and Hitler has helped Stalin defeat Finland and Stalin stands by while Hitler attacks Denmark and Norway and perhaps Sweden. Scandinavian isolationism has not changed but the balance of power, which Senator Borah thought was of no decisive importance, has changed completely.

Second, in the other war the Balkans were the weakest small countries: Germany had allies in Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey, and therefore the German push was in that direction. In this war, the Balkans are a military and diplomatic hornet's nest, what with their own military forces, the conflicting interests of Russia, Italy, and Germany, the changed position of Turkey, and the presence of a powerful Allied army in the Near East. The Scandinavians are, therefore, the easier prey; for in addition to being isolationists they are on this occasion isolated: that is to say they stand alone by their own choice and they have no powerful friends near at hand.

Third, in the other war the United States stood up as the armed champion of neutral rights. This meant that the Kaiser could not begin to wage war totally in the northern seas which wash the shores of Scandinavia until he was willing to face the consequences of American participation in the war. Therefore, before we entered the war, Scandinavia was protected by the restraint which we as a great neutral imposed upon Germany; after we entered the war, Scandinavia was protected by the fact that Germany had her hands too full for any sideshows. But in this war we have surrendered neutral rights wherever we think Hitler's submarines, airplanes and mines are capable of causing trouble, and we have announced that we shall abandon them anywhere else in the world, except only within three hundred miles of the American coasts, where Hitler or his partners desire to destroy neutral rights. Thus we have done our very considerable part in isolating Scandinavia so that the Nazis and the Bolsheviks may do what they please, subject only to what restraint the Allies can impose.



THE LATE SENATOR BORAH
No one will say the Scandinavian nations have not followed his isolationist policy to the bitter end

THE GREAT lesson of the Scandinavian tragedy will not have been learned until men understand the difference between an isolationist foreign policy and an isolated position in the world. In the other war the Scandinavians were protected by a balance of power in which the Allies, Russia, and the United States kept Germany in check. Because they were protected and therefore not isolated in the face of aggressive neighbors, they could make an isolationist policy work. In this war the balance of power was upset from the outset by the Russian partnership with Germany and the American surrender of neutral rights upon the sea. This left the Scandinavians isolated, and, therefore, precisely because they had become isolated—Finland in the presence of Russia, Denmark and Norway in the presence of Germany, Sweden in the presence of both Germany and Russia—the policy of isolationism has been a disaster to all the Scandinavian countries. They would not prepare, trusting to the illusion that to be aloof is to be safe, and, refusing to hang together, they are being hanged separately.

The Scandinavian countries are involved in a devastating war because their leaders and their people had enjoyed such a long security from war and from military burdens that they had forgotten the fundamental difference between practicing isolation and becoming isolated. Our own isolationists have forgotten or have never understood the difference. But the Founding Fathers understood it perfectly, and the reason they made an isolationist policy work successfully for a hundred years is that they took good care in ample time to prevent the United States from becoming isolated. For they knew, as anyone can see by reading the correspondence of Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe, that it was not the oceans which would enable us to practice isolationism but the fact that the oceans would be controlled by ourselves and our friends.

THE LATTER DAY isolationists are a dangerous influence because, like the Scandinavians, they are running the gravest risk of isolating this country. They do not understand what Jefferson saw clearly, that an isolationist policy will work only if a country is not in fact isolated. Once a country is in fact isolated, it can no longer enjoy the luxury of an isolationist foreign policy; it must then arm to the limit, seek allies, and live insecurely.

That is why Senator Borah's statement about Scandinavia is so profoundly significant in the light of what has happened to the Scandinavians. For it reveals the great illusion, an illusion that has in some degree paralyzed all the democracies—the illusion that wars can be escaped by avoiding them and not by preventing and resisting them.

Fair Enough

Yussel And Hitler

IN THE CAREER of Joe, or Yussel, Jacobs, the manager of prize fighters who has just died, there was capsuled a mocking parody on the policies, aspirations and pretensions of nations. His first champion of the world was Michael McTigue, who won the light-heavyweight title from Battling Siki, an authentic, blue-gum jungle Negro, and a gay and gallant sportsman, in Dublin, Ireland, on a St. Patrick's night.

The unwisdom of a colored man with a title at stake in accepting a match with an Irishman named Michael McTigue in Dublin on St. Patrick's Night was obvious, and the result was merely the confirmation of the inevitable. But Mr. Jacobs, nevertheless, insisted that it was a scurrilous reflection on the honesty and sportsmanship of the Irish people to suggest that a prejudice could have influenced the result.

It might have been thought, however, that having once had the benefit of any possible sentimental influence in a contest affecting the championship, Yussel would never be guilty of accepting a similar risk. Great was the amazement of the prize fight profession, therefore, when, not long afterward, there came over the wires the shocking news that Michael McTigue, an Irish Catholic, owned and operated by Yussel Jacobs, a New York boy of the most conspicuous Jewishness, had lost the precious title by a close decision to Willie Stribling, a native son in Columbus, Ga., where the Ku Klux Klan was seeing blood in the moon.

RELATING his experience afterward, Mr. Jacobs said a prominent local citizen had called on him and Michael in their hotel room just before ring time and, pointing out the window to two trees, had remarked that the Ku Klux Klan had little patience with un-American or unsportsmanlike tricks. The crowd at the fight would be klansmen down to the last man and, by ingenious forethought, the ring ropes had been strung to the corner posts in loose-leaf or quick-detachable fashion.

"There is one tree apiece," their visitor said, "and there is plenty of rope. May the right man win."

"One tree was a great big tree and one was a little, limber tree," Yussel used to relate in after years. "So I told the guy my mother told me never to take the biggest apple or anything, so I would take the liddy-biddy tree."

THE CATHOLIC and the Jew brought their own referee to Columbus, and this unfortunate, a Jersey sportsman, Harry Ertle, was gravely embarrassed at the end of the 10 rounds, for Stribling was a handsome, showy high school athlete and a local hero and McTigue a timid, cunning, counter-fighter who looked worst when he was subtlest. Ertle first called the fight a draw, then reversed himself as the klansmen roared toward the ring and, finally, with a feeble gesture, indicated Stribling had won. Jacobs then invited a local official to decide the fight, knowing that such a verdict would not be valid, and made his escape with McTigue and Ertle.

The next day Mr. Jacobs reversed a historical error, as Mussolini and Hitler would put it. In safe territory, Ertle swore on paper that his original decision, that the fight was a draw, was correct. The feud between Jacobs and the Striblings, Willie and his paw, carried over, accumulating historic bitterness like some grudge between nations, until Jacobs fought them again in Cleveland, this time through the agency of Max Schmeling. His historic revenge was complete. Schmeling knocked out Willie Stribling.

Meanwhile, however, Yussel had been around. He had served as a deputy manager for Boo-Boo Hoff, the Philadelphia racketeer, handling fighters of that sportsman's stable, or kennel, and had picked up Schmeling more or less by chance. Schmeling, however, had made commitments to other managers, and Yussel finally resorted to the same device that the Germans used to wipe out their obligations.

HE INFLATED Schmeling, then refinanced him, so to speak, squeezing out the other claimants, except, of course, any who may have retained their interests by secret treaties. There is a sort of pugilistic league of nations, the New York Fight Commission, where all such treaties are supposed to be openly arrived at and filed, but there is dark diplomacy in pugilism of which Yussel was a master.

He repudiated treaties to fight Jack Sharkey after winning the heavyweight title for Schmeling on a foul, but when Jimmy Braddock similarly repudiated a solemn treaty to fight Schmeling, Yussel appealed to world opinion to witness the awful injustice of this treachery.

By now, too, Schmeling was Nazified under Hitler, and yet Yussel continued to manage him and fight for his rights, and Hitler permitted this because Nazi Germany wanted the heavyweight championship for German youth. In a fight in Germany, Yussel was photographed giving the Nazi salute, but the Nazis were equally compromised in permitting him to enter the ring at all as manager of their aryan superman. Hitler and Stalin have done little more violence to their principles in their alliance.

Like a realistic European politician, Yussel had no time for sentiment or idealism. He followed a straight yet devious line, always toward his objectives. Today's injustice was tomorrow's historical vindication, today's eternal enemy, tomorrow's ally. He and Hitler, Goebbels, Stalin, Mussolini, Baldwin and Franco had much in common.

Hazen to Leave Hospital Soon

Commissioner Hazen will leave Doctors Hospital next week, his physician, Dr. Stuart Foster, announced last night.

He said the 72-year-old commissioner was "doing beautifully" but would remain at his home for some time after leaving the hospital. Commissioner Hazen was stricken March 20 with a heart attack.

Portable Air Bases

By Donald C. Bingham
Captain, U. S. N., Retired

A New Factor In The War?

AT THIS STAGE of the struggle for Norway it is possible to say only that many more battles must be fought before either side can be said to have scored a decisive victory. A victory, of course, is not decisive unless and until it decides something of crucial importance—and the important point that still remains to be decided in this Norwegian campaign is whether Hitler's decision to invade Norway was a strategic master stroke or a serious fatal blunder.

Meantime, however, it is apparent that this Norwegian campaign, which has wrought a considerable alteration in the character of the war, may bring about some revaluation of the instruments of war.

The immediate problem for each of the belligerents in Norway is the same—i. e. to organize units of sufficient strength to attack the enemy and to maintain all gains. Each side, therefore, is pouring reinforcements into Norway by every means possible—that is to say, by both sea and by air.

What success, if any, Germany may be having in transporting forces by water across the straits is still a matter of conjecture. But in the air her initial advantages have been greatly augmented by possession of air bases in Denmark and southern Norway. Obviously the Allies must do everything possible to diminish this German advantage in the air.

THUS in its current phase the war seems to be primarily a struggle for the possession of landing fields in central Norway. Meanwhile, almost daily bombardments of the Danish and Norwegian landing fields have been reported. The purpose, of course, is to cripple and, if possible, destroy these bases as the Polish air bases were destroyed by German bombings at the very opening of the lightning war.

There will be, of course, and have already been, retaliatory bombardments of French and British landing fields. It is not impossible that, with the increase of aircraft production on both sides, stationary landing fields will become quite untenable. Accordingly, as the war progresses, we are likely to hear more and more of a new and relatively little known weapon which has been developed since the first World War—nothing less than mobile air bases. I am referring, of course, to aircraft carriers. Reports of increasing British aerial activity in central Norway may indicate that these bases already are being usefully employed on or near the Norwegian coast.

This usefulness is not likely to cease, no matter which side gains the victory in Norway. Or even if the war there should settle down into another stalemate such as now exists on the Maginot-Westwall Front, the landing fields behind the lines will more than ever become the objectives of the most intense aerial bombardment.

In that event it would appear probable that the British-French aircraft carriers would become a vital, if not indeed decisive factor. It is true that the aircraft carriers, and especially their decks, are exceedingly vulnerable, also that these carriers are primarily a part of the battle fleets and some doubt might be raised as to the advisability of exposing them to air attacks of the German air force.

The carriers may be as vulnerable as transports loaded with troops and supplies but certainly not more so. According to the press accounts, the British and French are sending a steady stream of troops and supplies into Norway with few, if any, losses. Therefore it is reasonable to assume that these mobile landing fields can be defended against German aircraft and submarine attacks as effectively as the transports. As a matter of fact, I am convinced that the aircraft carriers are even now a factor in the defense of the transports.

As Germany's sea power, except for the submarines, is practically nil, the British and French would not be jeopardizing the relative strengths of their battle fleets very much by using their aircraft carriers along the coast of Norway to support the movement of their land forces. Theoretically, they must keep in mind the battle fleets of Japan and Italy. However, war by its very nature is a gamble, and it would seem that the British and French would not be taking too many chances by throwing ten or more of their carriers into the fray for the purpose of supporting their land forces, even those deep in the Norwegian interior.

THE DECKS of carrier and their rolling and pitching incidental to sea conditions put limitations on the military characteristics of aircraft designed for use at sea. Type for type these may well be inferior to aircraft designed and built solely for operations from shore bases. Nevertheless aircraft from the carriers might well become the reserve which would clinch a victory. Furthermore, their numbers would enable them to surprise the enemy in areas where he could not utilize his own aircraft, especially if the British-French-Norwegian forces succeed in rendering unusable the enemy's landing fields in Norway by bombing, shelling or sabotage.

In addition to the aircraft from the carriers, other aircraft from battleships, cruisers and possibly other vessels are available to the British-French forces. If the Allies succeed in obtaining land bases along the Norwegian coast, these aircraft may or may not return to their ships, depending entirely on circumstances. Likewise, replacements could be sent to the ships, including the carriers, either from the home bases or from bases established in Norway.

Jack London Again

AT NOON on Monday she telephoned the office. "The elevator boy," she reported, "says your car is still at the curb, and it has two tickets." At 5 a. m. Officer Dalton had tagged it for "parking overtime." At 11 a. m. Officer Janesky had tagged it again, for "parking restricted loading zone." Both gentlemen invited me to appear in Traffic Court on Wednesday at 9.

Now Jack London had been something of a criminal too, so I took with me Joseph Noel's "Footloose in Arcadia" (Carrick & Evans, $3), which is an old friend's report on Jack London's wayward ways, to read in court. I had lived 24 years in New York without being summoned to court, but I understood that courtroom procedure was tedious. By 9:10, to my intense surprise, business began. No magistrate appeared — just some very cheerful police officers, who efficiently mulcted me of $4 and let me go.

ABOUT JACK LONDON'S criminal career it is difficult to judge, because Jack was, according to his own, his wife's, his daughter's, and all his biographers' testimony, a gargantuan liar. He was a born story teller; he liked to mould the bare bones of life into the flesh of fiction. He did it instinctively, artistically and incessantly.

There was, for instance, the celebrated Muldowney case, which once blazed across a nation's headlines. Joseph Noel, in "Footloose in Arcadia," writes as the newspaper-man-friend to whom Jack telephoned immediately after his arrest, and his story differs radically from that given in Irving Stone's "Lust for Life" and in other London sagas. Mr. Muldowney was a tavern-keeper who mistook Jack for a sign-paster and ordered him out of his gin-mill. "Maybe you think you could put me out," Jack retorted, according to Mr. Noel. Mr. Muldowney weighed 230 pounds, but Jack got in at least one strategically placed kick before Muldowney called the police. There was no witnesses but Jack London and Mr. Muldowney at the hearing, and the case was dismissed.

The next day Jack lunched with Joseph Noel. The more he drank, the angrier he got, but he had forgotten Mr. Muldowney; his ire was turned against the judge. Before supper time Jack was convinced that Judge Smith owned the Muldowney joint and that the whole affair was a sinister plot. Before midnight he wrote the judge a letter, concluding, "Some day, somewhere, somehow, I am going to get you, and I shall get you to the full hilt of the law," and he offered any papers which would print them, advertisements soliciting information on the corruption of the judge. . . . In due time he got his revenge. Jack sold his revised story of the affair to "The Saturday Evening Post" for $750. Mr. Noel believes that many of Jack's autobiographical stories, including "John Barleycorn," have about the same small percentage of factual basis.

Oklahoma's Tragedy

By Mark Sullivan

The Forces Behind Migration

I READ the novel, "The Grapes of Wrath," and went to the motion-picture of it. Millions of Americans have seen it, felt its strong appeal, sympathized with its characters, sensed the fineness of the art with which the picture is done.

The story is about a family, the Joads, who were driven from their Oklahoma farm. Piling their pitiable little possessions upon an ancient jalopy, they go to California, where they join many others of their kind from the same State, composing a class called "Okies." They become migrant farm workers, are exploited dreadfully, and endure much poignant misery.

I say "driven" from their farms—that word expresses the spirit of the picture. The forces that drove them off are mentioned by the author as three: One was drought; another was the coming of the tractor, bringing mechanized farming. The third force was a financial institution, or rather a financial process, a detail of the economic system.

Just what this economic force was, the victims are not clear. They cannot identify the author

AN OKIE MOTHER
To explain her is not to solve the problem of their doom. The immediate spokesman, that ordered them from the land, was a local bank. But back of the local bank was somebody or something in the nearest big city, Tulsa—a bigger bank. And farther back was somebody or something in the East. The victims could not identify it. It was just "somepin'." One victim wants to shoot, but reflects, "maybe there's nobody to shoot—maybe the thing isn't men at all."

THE AUTHOR of the novel isn't clear, either. He says, of the victims, that "all of them were caught in something bigger than themselves . . . A monster . . . which had enmeshed them."

The oppression practiced by this economic "monster" upon the Joads, its cruelty in driving them from their farm, is the theme of the "Grapes of Wrath." The story is presumably designed as, certainly is received as, an indictment of the capitalist system. It is supposed to be, for the class whose tragedy it pictures, what "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was for the Negro slaves. "The Grapes of Wrath" is a direct and large contribution to the current questioning of the existing economic system, and the current agitation for change—expressed by Tom Joad when he says: "We've got a bad thing made by men, and by God that's something we can change."

I read the book, saw the picture. Then, from the fiction, I turned to re-read some history.

Exactly 51 years ago this week every one of those Oklahoma farmers, or their fathers, got their farms from the Government, absolutely free. On April 22, 1889, at 12 noon, upon a signal—shots fired by Army officers lined up along the border of the Territory—20,000 persons rushed in and took possession of 160 acres each. (This was the most famous "rush;" other parts of Oklahoma were taken up in later "rushes.") It was in this way that the identical characters in "The Grapes of Wrath" got their farms—Tom Joad speaks of his family having "been on this land for 50 years . . . We wuz all born on it."

ALL GOT their farms for nothing. The farms were of varying value. Probably most of them were worth $2,000 to $4,000. After the Territory had been settled some years, they were worth much more. During the boom in farm prices following the Great War, they were worth $5,000 to $8,000.

Of the families who, in 1889, got free farms, many held on and prospered. These compose the stable farm population of Oklahoma. Some, in later years, sold their farms, at good prices, to move to towns and cities, where they kept their economic status.

But some were the Joads, the "Okies." What happened to them is fairly clear. First they mortgaged the land; then they failed to pay the interest; then they gave up the land to the mortgage-holder; thus they became renters, share-croppers—this was their status as the "Grapes of Wrath" opens. Their final fate was, as the novel tells, homeless wandering.

TO SAY how much this fate was chargeable to an economic "monster," to the capitalistic system, and how much to traits of their own personalities, would be a difficult appraisal. They had many appealing qualities; as depicted in "The Grapes of Wrath," they stir sympathy. They were not capable of being farm owners. They had sympathy. They were capable, in right circumstances, of being good citizens. But they were not capable of being farm owners. They had the dreamer's impracticality. They lacked stability, prudence, foresight, the quality called "managing."

That such a class exists is frankly stated in the report of a committee which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace set up to report on the Farm Resettlement Administration.

"Eleven per cent are now capable of assuming the full responsibilities of farm ownership, and another 31 per cent have undertaken the purchase of a small holding provided technical guidance is continued for a time. An additional 33 per cent appear ready to graduate into farm ownership after further guidance and education for a period not exceeding five years. About one-fourth are so incapacitated by age, ill-health, or lack of ability or interest, that the outlook for ultimate attainment of ownership appears slight."

This class exists. To explain them is not to solve the problem they present.

Upswept Hair, Modified, Held Lasting Style

Personifying dignity, poise and individuality, this modified version of the upswept coiffure remains the classic style for young matrons. Designed by Helen Hunt, motion picture hair stylist, for Dorothy Peterson, starring in the current film, "Too Many Husbands," the profile study (below) shows the hair brushed upward in large swirling curls, pulled back from the forehead in a center part. The back view indicates a smooth neckline with the hair brushed upward and molded to the contour of the head.

Coiffure Expert Terms It Best Arrangement For Young Matrons; Declares Long Bob Adds Age to Face and Looks Sloppy

By Carolyn Abbott.

THROUGH a series of evolutions in hair-does—that in turn have seen the rise and downfall, disappearance and return of the mannish bob, intricate curls, glamour and page boy bobs—the modified upswept coiffure has merged as the classic style for young matrons. Reasons for its predicted permanency are that it gives dignity, poise and serenity, and is by far the most flattering and aristocratic looking arrangement for this type of woman. This is the opinion of Paul Rilling, of Minneapolis, hair stylist and authority on permanent waving.

Speaking to the students of the Washington School of Beauty Culture, which is run by Miss Mary Howard, Rilling expounded his theory when asked "What is the most becoming coiffure for the young matron?"

"Glamour bobs, page boy cuts give neither dignity nor softness to the face of the matron," he said. "But the upswept coiffure should not be too severe or it too will be outmoded. Softness, neatness and flattery to the face should be the basic principle of the young matron's hair-do. The long bob adds age to the face and looks sloppy. Any down line increases the appearance of age."

Consider Face Contour

In the upped coiffures, as well as in all others, the contour of the face should be considered in styling the hair, Rilling pointed out. For example, women who would counteract a long nose should break the hair line in the back and by all means avoid any sort of top knot arrangement that is on an even line with the nose. The fat woman should stay away from too many curls but should also steer clear of anything too severe as the mannish haircut that reached its peak during and after the last war.

Rilling, who was one of the first to give permanent waves in this country, stressed the importance of the care of the hair. Also he blasted theories and superstitious that hover around permanent waving.

"Since there is more wear and tear from sports, sunshine, steam-heated buildings on the woman's hair today," he explained, "than on their mothers' or grandmothers' hair, their hair needs double attention. It has become drier and lost its gloss and sheen and only the restoration of the oils that have been taken away by artificial living will keep it in good condition."

Balanced Diet Necessary

A balanced diet is necessary to healthy hair. Lack of essential vitamins in the food affects the nervous system, which in turn affects the condition of the scalp. Some oily substance with a lanolin base is excellent for dry hair. As for the success or failure of a permanent wave, Rilling maintained that it depends largely upon the physical condition.

Asked about the effect of ether on permanent waves, Rilling replied: "If a nurse works in the operating room daily, ether will dehydrate the moisture from the hair. It will become dry and brittle and that type of hair is difficult to take and hold a wave. However, if a woman is given ether for a minor operation and is in good condition otherwise, that small amount of anesthesia will not keep the hair from taking a good permanent wave. The condition of the body itself, rather than the amount of ether determines the success or failure of a wave, in the latter case."

He said that expectant mothers need not fear to have their hair permanented. However, he pointed out that the success of the wave depended upon the individual. "Sometimes, the wave will come out perfect and at other times for other women, no wave will stay if given in the first or last stages of pregnancy and the only way to find out is through test curls."

Work Hard, Relax Frequently, Is Advice of Gertrude Lawrence

By Ida Jean Kain

SUCH a to-do is made these days over child psychology that the bewildered parents scarcely knows which way to turn. If you ask an innocent bystander, parental self-confidence could stand a little bolstering! And Gertrude Lawrence is just the girl to do it!

Miss Lawrence was brought up by a mother who firmly believed that "idle hands make idle minds." Perhaps that explains the greased-lightning quality of Miss Lawrence's mind, as well as her industry! Little Gertrude was brought up to work. She learned to scrub floors, help with the family wash, manage a house, make her own clothes, and even, on occasion, trim a hat so that it did not attract undue attention!

There must be some connection between all this childhood training and the fact that today she is generally regarded not only as a superb actress but as a useful citizen.

GERTRUDE LAWRENCE

Keeps Busy

After frolicking through evening and matinee performances of "Skylark," she shows up smiling at a dozen charity affairs per week, leads a civilian relief organization for the war zones, directs a radio program she calls "30 Minutes' Leave" for the soldiers on the Western Front, and knits steadily on sweaters for small boys!

If that isn't being useful, what is?

But for all her industry, Miss Lawrence is not the martyrish type. She does not see any sense in keeping on going until she drops in the traces! She has a rule about rest—and it is as rigidly enforced as any other for getting things done. Every afternoon, this is her set routine:

First, she cleanses her face and throat with cold cream; then she arranges her hair—and she can do a professional job of putting a wave in!—and then she hops into bed. Sometimes it is for two hours, other times for only 20 minutes. But during that time, she has trained herself to relax completely.

Relaxation, she believes, is a trick the average woman could practice to great advantage. Almost every woman needs a little time off during the day to recoup her energies. If she would take it off, she could get more done! But relaxation can be carried further, according to Miss Lawrence.

Secret of Poise

"It is the whole secret of poise," she declares. "Sometimes we see a beautifully gowned, perfectly groomed woman who spoils her appearance by a slovenly posture—but that is not the same thing as relaxing. One should be erect, yet relaxed. A cat has the technique down pat. Watch a cat enter a room . . . first it pauses at the door, then it takes a look around, and finally, enters slowly, master of the situation and perfectly at ease!"

Miss Lawrence likes swimming, tennis, golf and practically all outdoor sports, but she thinks that singing lessons would do more for the average woman in the way of poise than anything else. A singer is compelled to hold herself erect, and yet she must be relaxed.

She has no weight troubles. She is 5 feet 3 inches tall and, as she says, should weigh 115 pounds, "but when I get up to 112 pounds, I begin to worry about getting fat, and my weight goes right down!" She stays around 108 pounds. If you watched your weight that closely, you wouldn't have any trouble, either!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Husband Blithely Ignores Wife's Need of Rest, as She Taxes Ailing Heart With Wage Earning, Housework

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 23 years old and have been married for over three years. A year after I was married I became nervous and run down, so I was advised to consult a physician, which I did. He told me I had a heart ailment resulting from rheumatic fever, which I had as a child. There seems to be no cure for it; but rest, I am told, will prolong my life.

I am employed and have been for the past six years, because my financial responsibilities include contributing to the support of my mother and helping my husband "make both ends meet." My work is hard and the hours are long, and while my husband knows of my condition and my need for rest, it does not worry him.

He is in a position to make a lot of money, but he isn't interested in developing his opportunities. I have talked to him, trying to urge him to forge ahead, but it's all in vain. He is very nonchalant; nothing bothers him. To make matters worse, he comes home late for dinner with liquor on his breath. Sometimes he stays out until the small hours of the morning, and on several occasions he didn't come home all night. When asked where he's been, he says, "Having beer with the boys. You should be glad I'm decent."

Miss Haworth, all this worries me so much that I want to give up. But I have so much pride that I can't tell anybody the true state of affairs. Nobody knows the inside story. Everybody thinks my husband is wonderful. But I have learned in the past year that his family is just like him. In fact, another person who married into his family asked me, "How did you ever get involved with such people?"

Ever since I married him, I have been doing everything in my power to make a pleasant home, doing all the housework, in addition to working outside, and this in spite of nervous and physical illness. I don't believe I can carry on much longer with things as they are. Please advise me what to do. LOU.

Two Possible Methods Of Relieving Strain

DEAR LOU: Pride is a poisonous substitute for peace of mind. And so long as you let pride (hypocritically served) stand in the way of a clean-cut attempt to solve your problem of unjust overwork and constant worry, you must hold yourself primarily to blame for your wretched predicament.

In my opinion, you have a choice of two possible solutions—neither of which will bring you perfect happiness, to be sure; but either of which should relieve your intolerable burden to some extent.

The one remedial measure consists of resigning your salaried job, on warranted grounds of failing health; thus obligating your husband to pay all the bills. Unless he is a complete no-account, this should provide a greater incentive to him to "forge ahead," to "develop his opportunities," to "make the money" he has the chance to make—than any amount of argument or urging.

Such a step might penalize your mother, of course, through depriving her of your partial support. But unless you take the "stitch in time that saves nine," you may find yourself eventually a chronic invalid, more dependent even than she is. Having resigned your present full-time job (which entails long hours of hard work), you could rest a bit before finding a half-time job which pays enough to meet your obligation to her.

Your husband, apparently, is one of those spendthrift optimists and white-collar "play boys" who will sponge off anybody who is good for a "touch." With a selfishness that is more thoughtless than calculating, he is "working" you for all you are worth; or, rather, to the extent that you are willing to tolerate his exploitation. There is only one forthright approach to getting his hand on the plow where it belongs; and that is for you to abandon said plow in the furrows (figuratively speaking) and retire into the home to tend to your own knitting. The next move is up to him. Either he will handle his end of the job; or he won't.

And in the event that he won't, you come to the alternate tolerable solution of your present back-breaking assignment, namely, legal separation or divorce, with legally enforceable provision for your partial maintenance out of his earnings. If it can be established that his irresponsible behavior is making your home life intolerable, and progressively undermining your health, you have grounds for legal redress of the type suggested.

I agree with your statement that you can't "carry on much longer with things as they ar " And so, while you still have the strength to take self-protective action, I advise you to take it. But if you already know from experience that it is useless to expect any real manliness from your husband—regardless of the emergency or pressure—then I recommend immediate teps toward legal separation, without resigning your job. It might not be easy to find another; and once you are free of the mental, domestic and financial burden he represents—with only yourself and your mother to work for—your health should gradually improve.

It would be a real crime to sacrifice your health to a no-account husband, at the comparatively tender age of 23. If a return to the single life is the one avenue to health-insurance open to you—the only way of getting the rest you must have, and the relief from helpless worry—then by all means take it, and don't waste a tear on your busted romance. At 23, one's adult life is just begining, and so long as you preserve your health, your further opportunities for happiness are as numerous as the days that stretch before you.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

World's Fair Chorus Members Glad To Get $40 a Week and Steady Jobs

New York, April 26.

OUR POOR old World's Fair, entering its second year in two weeks, is always getting belted about the head and body from all directions. Last year the high cost of labor was blamed for much of its fiinancial agony—which was pretty acute—and this spring the actors' union made mystic passes at the show.

Mayor LaGuardia, who is a great stirrer-upper and a mighty calmer-downer, too, was the active dove of peace in the scrap, but it is an odd fact that the boys and girls who are to perform in the $500,000 American Jubilee show really put on the crusher. The union was demanding a minimum $45 a week for the chorus people, while the show said $40 was a proper scale. While the opponents were rolling over and over, biting and gouging, the chorus kids got fed to the bicuspids. In essence, they hollered "We'll work for $40. The main thing is, we want to work, so let's get at it!" Thus a compromise was arranged.

Chorus salaries vary always in a small range, here. It is my belief that Billy Rose's mermaids and dancers drew $35 a week at the Aquacade last summer, which is often a chorine's pay on Broadway stages. Some girls work for $30 a week here, in show business. Their rights and working conditions are generally well cared for by the Chorus Equity Association, their union.

The point about the fair is that the kids can count on a good summer's work, barring accidents such as financial flops, in pleasant surroundings and at good wages. When producers threatened to kill the show over a money dispute, the chorus children naturally screamed in pain. I'm glad they won, for it means several months of steady work at a living wage.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—There is no let-up in the number of European titles that seem to find the United States so much nicer than their home towns these days, and not all of them are drones, by a long shot, though most of them deal in luxuries. Take the von Pantz boys. Yes, that's correct. They are Austrian barons unhorsed by anschluss. Hubert runs a ski slide up in my native New Hampshire, while Kurt draws portraits of pretty ladies, or others. The von Pantz lads keep active. Others of these uninvited titles simply feed at the social trough here, and sleep under railroad bridges, for aught I know.

Gingerbread Is Choice of Men in Magazine Survey

A GINGERBREAD man with raisins for eyes and the buttons down his vest is a delight that most of us have experienced when children. Perhaps that is why when a survey was conducted by Miss Miriam Williams, associate food editor, the Farm Journal and Farmer's Wife magazines, asking men to answer the question, "What's Wrong With My Wife's Meals?" that the men reminisced back to their childhood days and chose gingerbread as a favorite food.

Mrs. Williams was a recent visitor in Washington and told about the survey she conducted. She said the results showed that men preferred food of good quality rather than fanciness. Good sensible breakfasts were also on the preferred list, also vegetable soup. But gingerbread received the greatest acclaim.

Gingerbread is one of the few cakes that is better when eaten hot, although it is also good cold. It may be served with whipped cream or a sweet sauce such as orange or lemon sauce. Following is a recipe for making "men's choice."

Gingerbread

Mix and sift 1 cup flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon ground cloves. Heat ⅗ cup sour cream, remove from heat, add 3 tablespoons butter and stir until melted. Add 1-3 cup molasses and pour into 1 well beaten egg gradually, stirring constantly. Add this mixture to dry ingredients and stir quickly. Mix just enough to make batter smooth. Pour into a buttered pan and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Science Evolves New Shoe Style Designed to Fit Feet in Motion

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor

In spite of the fact that web-footed shoes, new lasts and astounding combinations of color are reported almost daily, it is seldom we find really revolutionary news in foot fashions. But every woman who wears shoes will be interested in knowing that science has stepped in to put attractively shod feet in step with health.

Marshall Adams

News about this progress came to Washington this week through a man known as the "Scientist among shoemakers." He is William F. Washburn, president of a shoe concern that for the last 15 years has been quietly growing into a scientifically organized business, concerned more with its ethics than with the number of shoes it sells. Mr. Washburn and his associates have perfected a shoe they call "Balance in Motion," now attracting converts at a local store.

Shoes Add Beauty to Gait

Piqued with the prospect of "seeing" a completely revolutionary shoe, it was a surprise to find these just normal, pleasingly designed shoes which women with or without foot ailments would be proud to wear.

Balance in Motion is the first shoe ever built and fitted specifically for comfort, true balance and beauty while the foot is in motion. It is the result of 15 years' study by the Gait Laboratory, at the University of Rochester's School of medicine and surgery. Mr. Washburn, chief research associate of the laboratory and codiscoverer with Dr. Russell Plato Schwartz of the principle of balance in motion in women's shoes, explains how this principle came into being.

"Often the most beautifully groomed women look good only when seated," he said. "When in motion, they lack poise and beauty of stride. Since improperly fitted shoes too often rob a woman of fluid beauty in posture and walk the logical need arose for creating foot covering that assured normal, natural motion."

Foot "Wobblers" Aided

With this need, came the development of new apparatus and instruments for measuring the human foot at walking and striding gait. These motions have been recorded with permanent accuracy to 100th of an inch and 1,000th of a second in timing. Thus, the old belief that women were most healthfully fitted in low heels has been exploded by the Gait Laboratory's research which has also developed a heel meter to determine the proper heel height for women of varying proportions. Mr. Washburn reports that 65 per cent find the greatest efficiency and grace in a 1¾-inch heel and that many foot "wobblers" have proportions best abetted by a heel as high as 2½ inches.

Lace Frocks

Paris (AP).—Lace trimmed frocks include taffetas and chiffons. A navy taffeta dress has white lace frilling to top the deep flounce on the skirt and edge the short puffed sleeves. A white chiffon model with long sleeves is paneled full length in front with sheer black lace and again on the bodice back down to waistline.

There are tiered styles in otherwise simple dinner frocks, three tiers for a skirt with each tier showing a shirred heading. Taffeta is used for these.

Princes and Peasants Mingle In Costume at Supper Dance

Mandarins, DuBarry, a Hula Dancer Are Among Merry Company of Costumed Notables at the Sulgrave Club

BAVARIAN PEASANTS, French marquises, grownups in rompers, and two pretty girls representing "The Grapes of Wrath" whirled merrily about in the Sulgrave Club ballroom last night at the last of this year's series of Friday supper dances.

The motley gathering wore costumes which ranged from the lavish to the extremely simple but ingenious. In all the five years the dances have been held, this was the first fancy-dress affair, and it was voted a tremendous success by the many who lingered on until the small hours.

Mrs. John R. Williams, as originator and chairman of the dances, was of course, exempt from dressing up, but nearly everybody else complied. "Ma" Williams occupied her usual table at the entrance to the ballroom and distributed the handsome prizes—silver ice thermos affairs for the men, and cunning, bright-colored parasols with handbags to match for the gals. The trophies went to the wearers of the prettiest and the funniest costumes.

A dark-haired, striking Mme. DuBarry turned out to be Mrs. Thomas Adams, who wore the outfit she had made for a party given by Stellita Stapleton during her debutante days. It was at that party, incidentally, that Mrs. Adams met her husband-to-be. The dress was of black velvet, embroidered with strands of pearls, and the skirt measured nearly 5 yards around the bottom.

"It weighs at least 20 tons" sighed Mrs. Adams to her husband, who was in the uniform of an officer of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Walker Takes Up Hula

Early yesterday Mrs. Aldace Walker rushed downtown to a well-known hula teacher to take a preliminary lesson in preparation for the party. She wore a real Hawaiian grass skirt and leis which her sister, Mrs. Millard Tydings, had brought back from a trip to Honolulu. So enthusiastic was Mrs. Walker about her first lesson that she immediately signed up for a series.

"Is that a Chinese mandarin?" everybody asked, pointing to a tall, handsome, white-haired lady in a beautiful satin costume heavily embroidered in gold. They discovered that it was Mrs. George T. Pettingill, wife of the Navy Yard commandant. During their tour of duty in China, she had picked up this costume, which once belonged to a famous Chinese actor.

Before the dance Mrs. Pettingill gave a dinner for John Hammond, who sails on Tuesday to join the English army. A British citizen, he has been making his home here and is a partner in James Mitchell's antique shop. Last night Mr. Hammond forgot "the situation" for a while in a baby costume—rompers and rattle.

Amory Lawrence Dinner Host

Eleanor Flood and Ellen Flowerree both represented "The Grapes of Wrath." Eleanor wore a costume borrowed from Mannix Walker, bright red and hung with artificial grapes. She also wore grapes in her hair.

With her were Nancy and Barbara Iselin, up from the hunt country for the night. The trio had been guests of Amory Lawrence at dinner before the dance.

Peasant costumes were everywhere. Patricia Prochnik wore an authentic Austrian one, with layers and layers of petticoats. Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser were Bavarians for the evening, topping off their bright colored frocks with little flat straw hats with long ribbon streamers. With their cousin, Arthur Bradley Campbell, they were honor guests at a dinner given by Mrs. George Marye.

Mannix Walker was a kindly "Mr. Chips," wearing an ancient white wig under his mortar board, and a black gown. Mrs. William T. Mann was a Scotch lassie, complete with kilts and a bonnet. A French court lady in tulle and satin turned out to be Ruth Tuckerman.

Frank Palms Give Dinner

A white lace mantilla over white taffeta made a Spanish lady out of Mrs. Frank Palms. She carried a big red fan and wore red shoes to match the bustle on her dress. Mr. Palms was an Englis yeoman in doublet and hose.

The Palms entertained at dinner beforehand for Mr. and Mrs. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Morgan—she was a Czechoslovak peasant—and the Misses Betty Beale, Nancy Ordway, who wore a dress her great-grandmother had owned; Nancy Woodward, a Spanish lady in black lace; Kitty DuBois, Betsy Barton and Lisette Riggs. The men were William Boswell, Frank Salisbury, Carol Perry, George Becker, Boris Timchenko, and Kenneth Failer.

Joan Hull, daughter of Actor Henry Hull, was a magnificent czarina. Robert Waggaman gave a big dinner beforehand, taking his guests on later to the dance. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson—she was a gypsy fortune teller—were hosts to a large group which included Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Scrivener, Emily Meyers, Eleanor and Cecilia vom Rath, Mary Washington, Billy Mitchell, Judson Bowles, Dean Rucker, Britten Brown, Bud Hammond and Denys Smith.

The Newlywed Dominicks Are Feted at Party

Guests at Cocktail Affair at Home of The Stanley-Brownes

Newly married Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Dominick were guests of honor at a cocktail party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Browne at their home on Bancroft Place.

The Dominicks—she was formerly Mrs. Elizabeth Howland—took only a brief honeymoon, and are already established in Georgetown. Yesterday, incidentally, was the anniversary of a week of marriage.

Among the friends of the young couple invited were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hiss, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger, Henry Whitney, Larry Knapp, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, Mr. and Mrs. John Laylin, Mr. and Mrs. John Borton of Alexandria, Columnist John Carter and Mrs. Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley-Browne are building a house at Thirty-second street and Woodland Drive, overlooking Rock Creek Park. They hope to move in early in June. Mr. Stanley-Browne is an architect and has fun planning an enormous living room facing the woods below.

Mme. Procope Is Honored by Mrs. Waldrop

Mme. Procope, wife of the Finnish Minister, was honor guest at the luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Frank Waldrop at the 1925 F Street Club.

Among the guests were Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. George Grant Mason, Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Edward Noble, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Lester Buchanan and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, jr.

—might be the plea of the bewildered "Babe-Lost-in-the-Woods" in the picture at center, posed by Miss Nancy Weller (popular deb of the past season) in the costume she wore last night at the final dance of the season of Friday Supper Club. The affair took place at the Sulgrave Club and was a gay masquerade costume event. In the pictures just above (at left) is Miss Rosemary Merrill, deb of the past season, in the Scarlett O'Hara costume she wore at the Sulgrave Club last night, and at right is Miss Barbara Bradley as the Little Dutch Girl.

Mrs. Basil Manly Hostess at Tea For Mrs. Chapman

Mrs. Oscar Chapman, who has been widely feted since her marriage late in the winter, was honor guest at a small tea given yesterday by Mrs. Basil Manly. Mr. Manly is Mrs. Chapman's uncle.

Both the hostess and her guest of honor had chosen navy blue frocks for the occasion. Mrs. Manly's was fashioned of lace and Mrs. Chapman's had a frilly white collar and cuffs. The party was pleasantly small, only about 25 having been asked.

On Sunday, May 12, Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will be honored at a tea to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Blair at their home in Alexandria. Mrs. Chapman is the former Miss Ann Kendrick, and her husband is Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

Miss McMillen Becomes Bride Of Mr. Newton

Couple Will Live In St. Louis After Wedding Trip

At a home ceremony yesterday afternoon Miss Margaret McMillen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. McMillen, became the bride of Bryon J. Newton, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Newton, of Adairsville, Ga.

The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris officiated at the home of the bride's parents at 4717 Twenty-fourth road, N. Arlington, Va. The living room was decorated with gladioli, and snapdragons, and a large bouquet of white carnations centered the dining room table.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride appeared in a street length frock of pale blue mesh. Her corsage was of roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Philip M. Fairbanks, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor, wearing a gown of blue print chiffon, set off with a corsage of roses. Stewart B. Moody, of Washington, was best man.

Following a reception, the couple left for their wedding trip. They will make their home in St. Louis, Mo., where the bridegroom is administrative assistant of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The former Miss McMillen, whose father is an attorney with the Federal Trade Commission, attended George Washington University where she was a member of Kappa Sigma Sorority.

Notables Hear Rubinstein's Recital at Polish Embassy

Diplomatic Set Is Heavily Represented At the Pianist's Benefit Concert; Many Dinner Parties Precede the Event

A distinguished group of foreign diplomats and residential society—American Government officials, however, were in the minority—turned up at the Polish embassy last evening for the benefit concert given by Arthur Rubinstein, famed Polish pianist.

The Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, loaned the embassy for the affair, which was sponsored by the Washington Committee for Polish Relief. After the program the 300 guests had the opportunity of meeting Mr. Rubinstein and his pretty wife, a slender ash-blond.

Many small and early dinner parties preceded the benefit. Mrs. Truxtun Beale was hostess at Decatur House, and had invited Mr. and Mrs. Rubinstein, but they never accept engagements prior to his performances. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling also gave dinner parties. At their home in Kenwood, Md., Mr. and Mrs. John McClure entertained for Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Emory S. Adams and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

In the party of Princess Boncompagni at the concert were Miss Edith Miller, Percy Blair, Prince Toumanoff, Miss Mary Patten and Miss Marguerite Woolley.

Mrs. Simonds Wears Black Lace

Mrs. Frank Simonds, chairman of the committee for Polish Relief, arrived at the embassy an hour ahead of time to help with final arrangements. She wore a simply fashioned frock of black lace.

To Washington especially to attend the concert came Princess Gourielli, who in public life is Helena Rubenstein. The prince accompanied her.

Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, was among those present, and other distinguished subscribers included Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian envoy, the Italian Ambassador and Princess Colonna, the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero, the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera; Mr. and Mrs. William Castle, Miss Mabel T. Boardman and Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin.

Senator Barbour And Wife Attend

Still others who subscribed were Baron and Baroness Baeyens, Jacques Dumaine and Count and Countess de Limur of the French Embassy, Senator and Mrs. Warren Barbour, Mrs. Robert Brookings, Mrs. Walter Brude Howe, Gen. and Mrs. William Crozier, the Cuban Charge d'Affaires and Senora de Baron, Donna Julia Brambilla, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis, Miss Helen Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, who brought a party of eight, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, accompanied by Mrs. Vincent Hubbell, of New York, who is visiting the Capital.

Mrs. Hubbell was wearing a dress which required an entire trunk all to itself for transportation down from New York. Made of layers and layers of vari-colored tulle, it had a skirt 70 yards wide at the hem. This, plus a necklace of diamonds and sapphires, diamond bracelets to the elbow, and a diamond tiara, made her the center of most eyes in the ballroom.

Mrs. Dougherty Is Hostess at Dinner Fete

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty entertained at a dinner for 12 last evening. Ranking guests were the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff, and the Commercial Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Meichant Mahoney.

Mrs. Dougherty will entertain at dinner again next Thursday, the party being one of the last she will give before she leaves the middle of May for her, Little Cedars, in Westport, Conn. She will return to Washington in November.

Vote League Members Visit School

Vocational Students At Chamberlain Observed at Work And in Recess

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Members of the Department of Government and Education of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters yesterday were guests at luncheon at the Chamberlain Vocational School, following an inspection of the institution.

The visit was one of their field trips in connection with a study of the educational opportunities and needs in the District. Mrs. Francis M. Walters, chairman of the department was unable to be present, as she appeared yesterday before the Senate subcommittee on appropriations requesting restoration to the budget of several items for education, struck out by the House committee. Among them was that recommended by Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of schools, in the original budget, to provide for two vocational guidance supervisors.

The group that visited Chamberlain School yesterday was headed by Mrs. Benjamin R. Wood, vice chairman. The women were impressed throughout their tour of the building, she said, with the thoroughness of the training given the students in the various trades and the feeling of the dignity of doing a good job, with which they are imbued. There were no monitors in the halls as the more than 200 students left their classrooms for lunch in the cafeteria. The young people are put on their own as they work—responsible for conducting themselves as they would in the business world, the women learned.

The league members also remarked the friendly relationship and understanding between the students and their principal, E. D. Reed.

Finishing a course at the vocational school is not a matter of a year or a semester, Mr. Reed explained, but of completion of units of work. When one job is well done, the young worker is promoted to the next. Students in the school range from those who have just completed the eighth grade to high school graduates, who compose 25 per cent of the enrollment. If a student works at one course for a time and does not progress satisfactorily, effort is made to fit him in elsewhere.

The program provides that half the day shall be used in acquiring manipulative skills; a fourth in study of the underlying principles on which the trade is premised, and the balance in physical education and music which are recreational activities; study of practical business English and in social studies, designed to give the student a basic understanding of American Government and of labor problems.

The league members saw the student-operated cafeteria with its young patrons, the kitchen where the boys were learning to be chefs; were waited on in the faculty dining room by girls learning to be hostesses and waitresses; saw in the mechanical department boys repairing refrigerators; found students in the business class auditing the accounts of different departments of the school; and one girl typing a brief for a local lawyer. In other classes boys were drafting and blue-print reading, advertising art was being taught and, in the small library, students were being trained as librarians.

The menu from which the visitors chose their luncheon included baked salmon, or steak and French fried potatoes; green peas, slaw, ice cream and lemon chiffon pie (the price 30 cents). The low cost of meals is due to the fact the school makes no profit on them, Mr. Reed explained.

Camp Fire Program

The Aowakiya group of Camp Fire Girls will present a program on "skillful living" today at the home of Peggy Summers, 5229 Seventh street northwest. In addition to original readings, sketches and brief dramatizations of various "health heroes," including Jenner, Curie and Pasteur, there will be an exhibit covering many Camp Fire activities. Mrs. O. M. Nelson, sponsor, will be present.

Maryland Federation Convention Scene Of First Step in Mrs. Whitehurst's Candidacy

THE CONVENTION of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, just closed, in Baltimore, is of importance to club women throughout the country for it marked the first step in the candidacy of Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of that city for presidency of the General Federation.

The motion for Mrs. Whitehurst's indorsement was made by Mrs. John M. Sipple, past president of the State Federation and also of the General Federation, and was seconded by Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, of Chevy Chase, past State President. It was Mrs. Hoadley who presented Mrs. Whitehurst's name in nomination for first vice president, the office she now holds, at the Tulsa meeting of the General Federation Council three years ago.

Mrs. Whitehurst, as chairman of the department of education and now as first vice president, has addressed the club women in 40 of the 48 States. She was editor of the Maryland State Federation magazine before serving as State president in 1930-32.

Her name will be placed in nomination for president to succeed Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, of Portland, Oreg., at the council meeting of the General Federation in Milwaukee May 20-25. Mrs. Hoadley will be present as delegate from the Chevy Chase Woman's Club. It is expected Mrs. Whitehurst will be elected without opposition and it will give Maryland the rare distinction of having provided two presidents to the General Federation in ten years.

PRIZE WINNERS—And, speaking of the Chevy Chase Club, it certainly distinguished itself when prizes were handed out at the Baltimore convention. In art, the Cora Lawson awards went to Mrs. Jean H. Hatoley, who won first in oils; Mrs. Fred Gauss, first in water color, and Mrs. Clarence E. Dawson, first in silver craft. Mrs. Fred Kipling received honorable mention for her water color. The club itself won one of the two Penny Art Fund prizes.

Mrs. Paul Kerby placed second in the poetry contest with her poem, "Search Not For Her."

A COW BELLE—Star Face, a Hereford heifer, has become a notable in the General Federation. She's not a member, but she has contributed upwards of $100 to the golden jubilee foundation fund.

It happened this way. Star Face was given to the Texas State Federation and formally "presented" to the General Federation at the council meeting here last January. There being no adequate provision for housing a heifer at the headquarters, 1734 N street, Star Face did not make the trip to Washington. However, at the council meeting, additional gifts such as $5 "for blue ribbon" and $10 "for cowbell" were made to the foundation fund. These have been added to the $50 which was recently paid for Star Face by Miss Ethel Foster, a Texas clubwoman who owns a ranch, which is expected to be a happy home for the heifer.

Mrs. Richard J. Turrentine, of Denton, Tex., director to the General Federation from her State, in making the unusual gift to the foundation fund expressed the hope that a Hereford from the ranch of a club woman will prove to be not a "golden calf," but a calf worth its weight in gold.

Alpha Delta Pi Installs Unit At Maryland U.

Chapter Designated Alpha Pi at Rites In Mayflower

Alpha Delta, local sorority at the University of Maryland, was formally installed as the sixtieth chapter of Alpha Delta Pi at ceremonies held in the Mayflower Hotel last night.

Mrs. Sidney R. Stanard, grand president, officiated at installation services for the new group, which is to be known as Beta Phi Chapter. Delegates to the sorority's regional convention, which opened yesterday afternoon in Washington, and members of Alpha Pi Chapter at George Washington University assisted.

Both alumnae and active members of Alpha Delta constitute the charter membership. Those in the active group are the Misses Loretta Ashby, Marie Augustine, Anna Virginia Ashlund, Isabel Reed Butler, Mary Alice Clark, Caroline Clinite, Ruth Evans, Alice Fiske, Catherine Gilleland, Ann Jarboe, Mabel Klebold, Philomena Osso, Willa Lee Ott, Imogene Rice, June Schmidt, Betty Jean Silver, Elizabeth Skill, Carolyn Webster, Margaret Wolfinger.

The alumnae are Shirley Byers, Florence Fowble, Louise Grotlisch, Anna Marie Hardesty, Marian Virginia Mayes and Inez Nevy.

Pledges include Cedella Fulton, Vivian Keller, Mary Peabody and Mildred Oursler.

More than 150 guests will attend the installation-convention banquet this evening in the Chinese room of the Mayflower when the new chapter will receive its charter.

Mrs. Stanard, in the last address on the banquet program, will make the presentation, and Ruth Evans, chapter president, will receive it.

Round-table discussions will be held tomorrow morning and will be followed by a luncheon for all visiting officials and delegates at the home of Miss Phoebe Beall, 3400 Newark street northwest.

The three-day session will end tomorrow afternoon with the installation tea, presenting Beta Phi Chapter to the university students. It will be held from 4 to 6 o'clock in the lounge of the home economics building, University of Maryland. Members of the Baltimore Alumnae Association will be hostesses.

Mrs. Richard Fourchy, past president of the Washington Alumnae Association, is chairman of arrangements for the convention and installation.

Mrs. Gasch Names Advisers

Looking ahead for the coming two years, Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, newly elected president of the National League of American Pen Women, yesterday had the initial meeting of her board and announced the appointment of past presidents as an advisory committee.

Those in this group who have been attending the biennial convention just closed include Mrs. Joseph Auslander, immediate past president; Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, of Chicago; Mrs. Faber Stevenson, Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, of Connecticut; Mrs. Harry J. Cunningham, chairman of recommendations, and Mrs. Agnes Newman, parliamentarian.

Mrs. Grace Dupree Ridings, of Sherman, Tex., newly elected State president of Texas, announced a $25 prize to be known as the Grace Dupree Ridings Prize and given two years at the next biennial convention for the best sonnet submitted in the poetry contest.

Tea, Kitchen Party Honor Club's Outgoing Officers

Buffet Supper for Miss Webster and Aides To Be Given Tonight, Followed by Informal Program at Lewis Hotel Training School

Two events this week-end will wind up the administration of Miss Marjorie Webster and her staff of officers at the head of the Women's City Club. Tonight there will be a "kitchen party" at the Lewis Hotel Training School, arranged by Miss Elva McNamara, chairman of ways and means, and tomorrow afternoon a tea, honoring the candidates for office who will be voted on Wednesday night.

The party tonight will begin with a buffet supper, served hot from the ovens at 6:30, and will be followed by an informal program, planned by Mrs. Laura Waters, chairman of the travel section and one of the candidates for club president. Entertainers will include J. Reese Bowne who will sing, and Elsie T. Ottinger, of Baltimore, who will give songs and readings. Miss Webster will preside as mistress of ceremonies. Miss Enid Volk, of New York, will present an illustrated travel talk on the national parks.

The tea in honor of the nominees for club offices will be given tomorrow at the clubhouse on Jackson place with a musical program, presented by three members of Sigma Alpha Iota, professional musical sorority.

The retiring officers, Miss Webster, Miss McNamara and Miss Miriam Edwards, will be in the receiving line.

The honor guests will include Mrs. Clyde B. Middlemiss, and Mrs. Waters, candidates for president; Mrs. Gertrude Lyons and Mrs. Gus Schuldt, for first vice president; Mrs. Frank Bowling and Mrs. Helen Montague, for recording secretary; Mrs. Aurie B. Allen and Mrs. William Weber for delegate to the District Federation and Miss Lottie Anderson, Miss Lida B. Earhart, Miss Mary E. Gott, Miss Elsa A. Needham, Miss Juliet M. Searle, Miss Webster, Mrs. John F. Bennett, Mrs. John M. Glover, Mrs. Lila B. Graves, Mrs. George B. Hartman, Mrs. Josephine Chandler Horner, Mrs. J. A. Mendelson, Mrs. Harry Packard and Mrs. Frederick Yates, for the board of directors to which five are to be elected.

Guest artists for the afternoon will be Mrs. Helen Turley, contralto, soloist at Third Church of Christ, Scientist; Mrs. Grace Guanmitz, pianist, and Laura Snyder, who will give dramatic readings. Miss Snyder is a former teacher of public speaking at Penn State College and Ithaca College and played for a season on the professional stage with Walter Hampden.

Members of the nominating committee will be hostesses. They are Mrs. Frances Williams, Mrs. I. B. Dodson, Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt, Mrs. Raymond H. Kelier, Mrs. George Estes and the Misses Flora S. Hoff, Jessie G. Lane and Jessie O. Elting.

Senate Votes Labor, Security Millions More

$3,417,270 Added To House Bill; Ickes Chided by Ashurst

By the Associated Press

The Senate wrote additional millions into the billion-dollar appropriation for Federal labor and security activities yesterday and returned the measure to the House.

The bill, totaling $1,025,057,170, was $3,417,270 over the House-approved measure and $59,068,528 above President Roosevelt's budget estimate.

Despite an Appropriation Committee effort to cut $25,000,000 from the $280,000,000 Civilian Conservation Corps appropriation, the Senate restored this fund and added other items, including an increase from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 in money for venereal disease control.

The Senate rejected an amendment by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, to make $45,380 available to operate a motion-picture film distributing agency in the Office of Education.

Senators Taft (Republican) Ohio, and McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, led a fight against funds for the agency, set up in the Education Bureau by President Roosevelt's second reorganization order.

Waxing alternately indignant and humorous, Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, took Secretary Ickes to task on the ground that he tried to "snort-circuit" Congressional taxing powers and acted like "Joe Stalin."

Ashurst complained that Ickes charged motion picture companies $500 a day for the use of public lands for location shots. Responding to the Senator's objection that this was an encroachment on Congressional taxing power, the Senate voted to forbid the charging of fees on certain lands.

Ashurst said he was "reliably informed" that issuance of the order calling for the $500 fees had been prompted by a "comic bouffe" rivalry between Secretary Wallace and Ickes over who should receive courtesy credit lines in pictures made on national park domain.

"I have been informed by gentlemen on whose sagacity and judgment I have been accustomed to rely," Ashurst said, "that the honorable Secretary one evening saw a picture taken in a national park, which is under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior, but the courtesy line said, 'Taken by the courtesy of the Secretary of Agriculture.' Instantly he went to work to see what he could do to require the appropriate courtesy title to be placed on the picture."

Ashurst disclaimed any intention to disparage the character or ability of Ickes. There was laughter when he asserted:

"He was a success in the Republican Party. He was a success in the Progressive Party and he is a success in the Democratic Party."

Contract Bridge

Women college club bridge players are conservative bidders, compared to the men. Witness today's hand, which was bid by only one pair in a women's tournament to a small slam at diamonds. Miss Stillhammer and Mrs. Blaikie, of the Wellesley team, were the two players to reach six diamonds on the hand. Their adversaries were Mrs. McEvoy and Mrs. Heenehan, of the Trinity Club.

The cards and bidding are shown in the box. Mrs. Heenehan's was a brave, vulnerable, semi-psychic bid with only two aces in her hand, but it failed to stop her adversaries from bidding the slam.

Mrs. Heenehan didn't double, even though she hoped her two aces might score. She led the ace of spades and then tried the heart ace. It was trumped by Mrs. Blaikie, who was then able to draw trumps and discard her clubs on dummy's high hearts, eliminating the club finesse. But the club finesse against the king would have been successful nad declarer needed it.

Mrs. Blaikie made six diamonds, losing one spade trick.

Club Plans Two Hikes In Shenandoah Park

Members of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club will leave Washington early tomorrow for the central part of the Shenandoah National Park. There will be a choice of two hikes, one 8 miles and the other 10½ miles. Both begin at Hawksbill Gap and end at Skyland.

The party will leave by bus at 7 a. m. from Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The leader of the trip is A. Laurence Curl, 2307 Russell road, Alexandria.

House Unit For Pay Roll Tax Slash

Proposed Reduction From 3-2.3% Would Save D.C. Employers $1,000,000 a Year

Washington employers would save approximately $1,000,000 a year under proposed amendments to the District unemployment compensation act adopted yesterday by the McGehee subcommittee of the House District Committee as a compromise, but the tax surplus fund would continue to accumulate.

Fearing a deadlock that would block any modification of the unemployment compensation act, members of the subcommittee agreed to a flat pay-roll tax cut from 3 to 2.7 per cent, postponement of the merit rating decision and increased employe benefits from $15 a week for 16 weeks to $16 a week for 20 weeks.

Chairman McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, said he will recommend the amendments to the House District Committee Monday and ask that they be presented to the House on the next District Day, May 13.

Accumulation Would Go On

District officials pointed out that the amendments would not stop the accumulation of unused tax funds in the reserve fund, which is now $17,500,000 and is expected to reach $20,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year.

Taxes under the present law have aggregated $6,700,000 a year with benefit payments amounting to only $1,450,000. Even with a cut in the tax receipts of $1,000,000 a year and a raise in the benefit payments, the surplus will amount to several million dollars a year.

The new tax rate and benefit payments will become operative July 1, if approved by Congress. Subcommittee members indicated that further changes in the law will be considered early next year and that despite the fact that the present law provides for an introduction of a merit-rating tax plan January 1, 1941, that this will be suspended pending further study by Congress.

In adopting the compromise plan the subcommittee dropped the sliding tax scale and the $20 weekly payments of the McGehee bill.

Pay-Roll Audit Dropped

Besides an increase of $1 a week, employes would gain by the fixing of minimum payments at $6 a week. The waiting period for benefits was cut to two weeks, and the qualifications were modified from 13 weeks of employment in the preceding year to $125 earnings within the year.

The subcommittee dropped a requirement that the pay roll tax receipts be audited, as requested by the Commissioners, and altered the civil service blanketing provision to require that each employe of the unemployment compensation board pass a noncompetitive examination prepared by the Social Security Board and the Civil Service Commission.

The pay roll tax, under the proposed amendments, would apply only to the first $3,000 of any salaried employe in line with the new Federal policy.

Lawrence E. Williams, president of the Board of Trade, yesterday issued a statement denying that its recommendation that an experience rating be inserted in the McGehee bill was responsible for the snarl in the legislation.

"The Board of Trade," he said, "is not making any efforts to delay this legislation through insisting on the inclusion of an experience-rating plan or any other provision. Taxpayers of the District will be equally pleased if the McGehee flat-rate reduction plan or an experience rating plan is adopted."

Fare Steals Cab And Driver's Cash; 2 Purses Snatched

One bandit and three footpads collected a taxicab and $28.30 last night in a holdup and two purse snatchings on District streets.

Charles B. Shiner, of 1632 Lincoln road northeast, lost his cab and $2.80 to a colored passenger he picked up at Fourteenth street and North Carolina avenue northeast. In the 4900 block of Bennings road southeast, the passenger thrust what Shiner believed to be a gun in his back, took his money and left him afoot.

At Ninth street and Mount Vernon place northwest, Zoa Beall, of Silver Spring, Md., lost her pocketbook containing $19.50 to a colored man. Two colored boys snatched her pocketbook, with $6, from Helen Walsh, of 126 Adams street northwest, in the 2200 block of First street northwest.

Burns in Gasoline Fire Fatal to Child

Genevieve Brown, colored, 2, died at Freedmen's Hospital yesterday, second victim of the fire which fatally burned her mother, Mrs. Addie Brown, 22, at their home, 3107 Thirteenth street northeast, Thursday.

Mrs. Brown died Thursday of burns received when gasoline with which she was washing floors ignited. The flames spread through the living room and set fire to her clothing and that of Genevieve and two others.

The others, another daughter, Shirley Brown, 4, and Mrs. Brown's sister, Luciel Young, 27, suffered minor burns.

Ball-Chaser Shot

Ronald Whisonant, colored, 7, of 1842 California street northwest, was shot in the legs when he pursued a ball into a neighbor's backyard yesterday. Police said the neighbor, a 47-year-old colored man, told them he fired his 12-gauge shotgun at the boy "to scare him." He said he thought he had removed all shot from the shell.

Doctors Plan Supreme Court Trust Fight

A. M. A., D. C. Society, 20 Individuals Face Federal Indictments

The American Medical Association will carry to the Supreme Court its fight against the anti-trust indictment obtained by the Department of Justice.

Seth W. Richardson, a member of the large legal staff representing the A. M. A. and the three allied medical groups and 21 individuals accused with the parent organization of violating the Sherman anti-trust law, yesterday asserted a petition for a writ of certiorari will be filed with the high tribunal on Monday.

Although 21 doctors were named in the indictment, handed down December 20, 1938, only 20 remain to face the charges. Dr. Thomas A. Groover, one of the 16 Washington physicians named, died last week.

Co-defendants with the A. M. A. are the District of Columbia Medical Society, Harris County (Tex.) Medical Society and the Washington Academy of Surgery.

The indictment, an outgrowth of the doctors' opposition to Group Health Association, a Federal employes' medical cooperative here, was sustained last March by the Court of Appeals, which reversed a District Court decision that the practice of medicine was not a trade.

The four medical bodies and individual defendants had to choose between submitting to trial under the indictment or requesting the Supreme Court to review the citation.

Boys Urge D. C. To Make War On Rats Official

A District rat exterminator was urged last night by two 15-year-old boys who are becoming known as the Pied Pipers of Washington at a meeting of the "Men of Tomorrow" at the Goodwill Industries.

Edward Wickers and David Loomis took the platform together before the group of 'teen age boys at the Industries and declared that they were "trying to get some public pressure behind the idea that Washington should be rid of the rat menace."

They told the group that they started their campaign of rat extermination at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church about six weeks ago and are carrying it into meetings of young people throughout the District.

The method of extermination is simple, said Edward and David. A trade-marked brand of poison, which will kill only rodents is mixed with meat and placed where rats are known to be.

After the meeting they said they had no ambition to make a career of rat poisoning. "It's good civic work," said Edward. "And it's a lot of fun," added David.

D. C. Fireman Invents System To Save Seconds in Alarms

Method Would Transmit Box Numbers By Numeral Instead of Punches; He Expects It to Reduce Garbling

A 28-year-old Washington fireman has invented an alarm system which he believes—and his superiors agree—will not only bring apparatus more promptly, but eliminate the danger of garbled orders.

Keith L. Bell, the No. 16 Engine Company private, who developed the new system during off hours at home, told yesterday how simple, yet how effective, is his brain child, which he has submitted for patenting.

Suppose your house catches fire. You run to the corner and turn in a box alarm. The box, we'll say, is No. 9669.

Each numeral of that four-digit number is recorded on paper tape at fire alarm headquarters, a typewriter-like device automatically punching out the figures. Ink is not used. The box number is perforated on the tape.

Headquarters immediately transmits the alarm, by the same process, to the fire stations.

Bell estimated that all this will take only 5 seconds—two for the alarm to be received at headquarters, two more for relaying of the signal and one second for officers at the stations to read it. Under the present system, he explained, it would take about 35 seconds.

"What we have now," he said, "is a hole-punching system for recording box alarms. Instead of receiving numerals, headquarters and fire houses get a series of punches on the tape. Box No. 9669, for example, would come in with nine identical punches—space—six punches—space—six punches—space—nine punches.

"Each punch consumes about a half second. Since No. 9669 calls for 30 of them, it would take 15 seconds for the signal to reach headquarters. Then 15 more to send it out. Then about five more for the man in the station to interpret the series of punches."

Not infrequently, he asserted, runs are made to the wrong box because the punches go askew. The numeral system, besides being much faster, would be free of such mechanical defects, Bell said.

It would also, he added, speed up the sounding of multiple alarms. The same principle can be applied to police call boxes for the convenience of citizens wishing to call police, Bell said. In this respect, it would be especially useful late at night or early in the morning when stores and homes are locked up and a telephone is not available to the person seeking to summon help.

Bell joined the District Fire Department in August, 1936, and he has been working on his fire alarm system ever since, tinkering with his home equipment during off-duty hours. He is a native Virginian, who moved here 11 years ago. With his wife, he lives at 1656 West Virginia avenue northeast.

33 Years Is Long Enough To Be Cyril, Court Informed

Others Defend Name, But Don't Blame C. Sidney Faller

Little boys named Cyril, take heart!

There is a way out, if you care to take it, when you grow up. You can follow the trail blazed by Cyril Sidney Faller, a contractor, of 1800 Varnum street northeast.

Varnum is nearly 33 years old now and yesterday he decided he had been Cyril long enough. He filed in the District Court a petition in which he informed the justices that "since boyhood, he has strongly disliked his Christian name." So would it be all right with the court to change his name legally to Charles Sidney Faller?

Faller's petition said he dropped "Cyril" long ago and all his friends now call him "Charles." Attorney John J. Wilson, who took no personal stand on the Cyril question, represented him in filing the petition.

But the good old name of Cyril was by no means without defenders among its bearers.

It is one of the oldest names going, declared Cyril B. Smith, 6619 East avenue, Chevy Chase, who pointed out that it had the ancient Greek form of Kyrilos and has survived all taunts and jibes well enough to be used in most modern languages.

And your friends probably will end up by calling you "Cy," said Cyril J. Jones, real estate man, 3819 S street northwest who declared that he could not go along with Faller that it was a matter to take to court.

Cyril A. Miller, automobile man, 2356 Fortieth street northwest, asserted that Cyril is "one of the best English names in the dictionary." People call him "Cy" too.

But all these Cyrils said they had childhood memories which enabled them to understand the views of their colleague and that if he really felt so strongly about it they wished him well with his new name. For themselves, Cyrils they have been so far, and Cyrils they intend to remain.

'Youth Elects Christ' Is Theme Of Church Dinner

Climaxing their "Youth Month" celebration, youths of Ninth Street Christian Church last night staged an election-keynoted banquet, picking Christ as their "candidate."

"Youth Elects Christ" was the theme of the function, at which James R. Kirkland, former assistant district attorney here, urged diners to elect Christ on a ticket of discipleship.

Earlier, three youths gave campaign talks, boosting the "platform" of Christ. They were Maurice Allen Hughes, Alice Margaret Harvey and Raybern Wilfred Keagy.

Announcement was made that Miss Nellie Mae Jope, 17-year-old daughter of the Rev. Clifford H. Jope, pastor, had been selected as the young person having made the greatest youth leadership contribution to the church during the past year.

4-Day Trek Cures Boy's Wanderlust

Cured of his wanderlust after a four-day hitch-hiking odyssey, 14-year-old Lionel Henry, 6708 Second street northwest, was back where he started from yesterday and "mighty glad of it."

Lionel, a pupil at Paul Junior High School, told his mother he didn't know what made him throw his schoolbooks into a clump of bushes last Monday and head for his grandfather's farm in Olney, Md. He got as far as Winchester.

Conference Hits General Property Tax

Real Estate Levies Called 'Vicious;' New Unit to Seek Equitable Assessing

After adopting a ten-point program of policy the first National Real Estate Tax Conference closed its sessions here yesterday by forming a new national organization to seek more equitable taxation.

The group which labeled the general property tax as administered in the country today as a "vicious," demoralizing agency," called for action to end the threat of over-burdening taxation.

First of the ten points indorsed was the principle of placing a limitation on the aggregate of all taxes which may be levied against any parcel of real estate by all taxing units.

Earlier, Lawrence G. Holmes, of Chicago, outlined the successful results of such a limitation adopted in nine States. Holmes cited figures showing the taxes in these States had decreased from 5 to 49 per cent.

"Pressure Groups" Condemned

The conference advocated strenuous efforts in bringing about economy in local, State, and national Government expenditures and condemned "pressure groups" which "serve their selfish interests at the public expense."

The principle was indorsed that revenue-producing properties built by Federal or local authority, which compete with privately owned properties should be taxed on the same basis as private properties. Exemption of capital gains and losses on real estate from the provisions of the Federal Revenue Act and amendment of the present Federal inheritance tax laws was also recommended.

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, told the group that the United States had probably the "most complex tax system known in history." He urged the establishment of a permanent tax structure with fixed principles as an aid to business recovery.

Michigan Plan Outlined

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, emphasized the need for a "new national economic constitution." He pointed out various economic changes that should be considered in mapping a new taxation program.

Prewitt Semmes, of Detroit, outlined the Michigan plan, which bases real estate taxation chiefly on income value.

The conference decided to name its continuing group "The National Conference of Real Estate Taxpayers." Membership is to be open to groups and individuals indorsing the organization's principles. Officers of the original body were named to take over establishment of the new group, which designated as president Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati, former Governor of Ohio.

Couple Killed As Fire Razes Dumfries Home

The fire that took the lives of Owen Carroll, 58, and his wife, Mrs. Nettie M. Carroll, 51, and razed their home near Dumfries early yesterday, was attributed to an overheated stove by Prince William County Coroner Dr. E. H. Marstellar.

He issued a certificate of accidental death. The home of Carroll, who was employed at the District Disposal Plant at Cherry Hill, Va., was situated 3 miles north of Dumfries. It was first seen afire by Wallace Lynn and David Pierce, both of whom are members of the Occoquan, Woodbridge and Lorton Fire Department. The dwelling was burned almost entirely before firemen got to the scene.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll were the only occupants. Their bodies were found by firemen among the ruins. The funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Bethel Methodist Church, Occoquan. Burial will be in the family cemetery there.

Mrs. Carroll is survived by four children of a former marriage, Raymond and James Brammell, of Arlington County; Mrs. Laura Oliver, of Woodbridge, Va., and Mrs. Lena Griffin, of Indianhead, Md.

Randolph Favors Truck-Route Shift

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday agreed to sponsor legislation to require trucks of 3 tons or more to follow the Bladensburg road Third street route to and from Baltimore after receiving a delegation from the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

The delegation, headed by Harold Clay, president of the association, complained that trucks have been using Rhode Island avenue and creating a disturbance and nuisance early in the morning.

Ten chairmen who will head committees in the National Symphony Orchestra's campaign for a $107,600 sustaining fund May 6 to 16 were announced yesterday by A. F. E. Horn, general chairman.

Walter Bruce Howe, vice president of the Orchestra Association, will act as vice chairman of the general committee. Mrs. R. H. Dunlap is campaign secretary, and Fred C. Spaulding will be campaign director.

The special gifts committee, which solicits contributions from large givers, will be headed by Thomas P. Morgan, jr., and Mrs. Milton W. King, with Mrs. Arthur T. Lyon as secretary.

Hill Heads One Group

John Rowland Hill will be chairman of the business and professional committee, which canvasses firms in Washington and vicinity. Vice chairmen will include Ruby A. Black, Margaret A. Blackistone, Bert M. Sarazan and James W. Hardy.

An Army group will be headed by Mrs. Barton K. Yount and Brig. Gen. Maxwell Murray, and a Navy committee will function under the leadership of Mrs. Emory Scott Land and Mrs. Alfred Johnson.

Mrs. Eugene Byrnes will lead the associations division, which solicits gifts from clubs and other organizations. Gen. Albert L. Cox will head the speakers' bureau.

To Cover Schools

The education field will be covered by a Catholic and parochial schools group headed by Eleanor Connelly and Mary L. McQuade; a colleges and universities group under Anna Pearl Cooper and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong; a private schools committee headed by Mrs. Royal T. McKenna; a public schools unit directed by Mrs. Miriam B. Hilton.

Mrs. Edwin B. Parker and Mrs. Robert LeFevre will have charge of a suburban area committee, and Mrs. Charles Bittinger and Mrs. Foster Adams will head the Orchestra Guild Committee.

Clarkson Plans To Retire July 1 As Phone Chief

Walter B. Clarkson, for ten years vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., scheduled to retire July 1 after 43 years of Bell telephone service, was guest of honor at a dinner given by friends and associates last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

CLARKSON

Clarkson joined the C. & P. Telephone Co here in 1897 and served in various capacities until he became associated with the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania. After holding several positions with that organization, he returned here as general commercial manager of the C. & P Companies and in 1928 was made assistant to the president. He became vice president of the companies and a director of the C. & P. Telephone Co. of Virginia in 1930.

Clarkson has been active in civic affairs here, frequently being associatde with the Community Chest and is president of the National Cathedral Association and the Travelers Aid Society.

West Pointers Of 1898 Hold Reunion Here

The War in Europe Fails to Compete With Old Times as a Topic

Eight of 59 graduates of West Point Military Academy, 1898, got together yesterday in the Army and Navy Club in class reunion and didn't say a word about Hitler or the Norwegian invasion. They talked about old fist fights, campaigns and waistlines.

They recalled that of the 59, who went from the Academy on 24 hours' notice to the Spanish-American War, less than 30 are living. About 20 of their number became generals; two lost their lives at San Juan Hill, and some 20 were killed in the Philippines.

Brig. Gen. E. D. Scott recalled that he hadn't seen Col. J. C. Johnson since graduation and Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, was convinced that the personalities of the eight classmen were unchanged by the 42 years since they left West Point.

A passing comparison of waistlines showed that these had changed little since graduation.

From there it went to the weather, with General Fries remembering that he came from West Point to Washington on April 28, 1898, to find snow.

Present were Gen. Malin Craig, Maj. Gen. Fox Conner, Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, Colonel Johnson, Maj Gen. William E. Cole, Brigadier General Scott, Major General Fries, and Col. William P. Wooten.

Woman Driver Is Killed as Auto Veers Into Ditch

A woman motorist was killed and a four-year-old boy suffered severe scalp lacerations in traffic mishaps here yesterday.

Edna Miller, colored, 38, of 1414 V street northwest, died after her automobile ran into a ditch on Massachusetts avenue extended about one mile beyond the District Line.

Police said she was driving alone and apparently lost control of her machine. She was taken to Georgetown Hospital and pronounced dead on arrival.

Allen Lambright, 4, was struck in front of his home, 1104 Fifth street northwest, by a car operated by Edward W. Marshall, 32, of 2523 Ashton street, Baltimore. Allen was treated in Children's Hospital Marshall was held at the Second Precinct station charged with reckless driving.

Another Q Street Water Main Breaks

An emergency cap on an 8-inch water main at Twenty-second and Q streets northwest broke last night flooding the street to a depth of several inches and temporarily cutting off water in homes on the north side of the 2200 block of Q street.

The same main broke on the south side of Q street a week ago. Water department officials at the scene yesterday expressed the hope that a nearby 22-inch high pressure main would hold.

They could not explain the breakage. It was pointed out, however, that the main broke across the street from a block of houses which were recently deserted after ground began sinking.

Reorganize D.C., Citizens Group Asks

'Congress Fiddling While District Burns,' Burroughs Unit Told by Finch

Opposition to enactment of "any new forms of municipal taxation" for the District and a request that the local government be reorganized in a manner "which will insure the greatest efficiency and economy," were voiced in a resolution adopted by the Burroughs Citizens Association at its regular meeting last night.

Introduced by Wilbur S. Finch, chairman of the District Suffrage Association, the resolution stated that Congress "for the past several years has been seeking new forms of municipal taxation for the District in order to meet the ordinary running expenses of the city."

Finch declared that "Congress has been fiddling while the District burns" in its rejection of reorganization plans during the past several years.

"Lover's Lane" Problem

The problem of a "lover's lane" on Eighteenth street between Taylor and Shepherd streets northeast was brought to the attention of the association by Frank G. Bauman, 4127 Eighteenth street northeast. He said there were no street lights in the block, and that autos were parked there "nearly every night."

Lieut. J. R. Jeffries, of the Twelfth Precinct, who attended the meeting, said "We've been looking the situation over, but what can we do?"

The Health Department was requested by the association to investigate rats and dumping conditions in the vicinity of Eighteenth and Taylor streets.

Benjamin Neal, of the "I Am an American" citizenship movement, discussed the importance of good citizenship before the group.

Other resolutions adopted included indorsement of the citizenship movement, indorsement of the Police Boys Club, a request for police enforcement of the law in regard to drivers' hand signals, and the placement of a traffic light at Eighteenth and Monroe streets northeast. The meeting was held at the Burroughs School.

Anacostia

A resolution urging that Sixteenth street be extended from W to Green streets southeast was adopted by the Anacostia Citizens Association at their meeting last night.

Meeting in the Anacostia High School, the group also discussed ways by which bus service on Good Hope road might be improved to adequately care for the number of students in that sector.

Latest efforts of the special committee trying to effect the establishment of a Metropolitan Police Boys Club in the Anacostia area were reported. Consisting of the association president, Robert H. Hellmuth, William Tucker and Emory F. Weightman, the committee was appointed to cooperate with the Anacostia Lions Club in that respect.

As their guests the civic group had nearly 75 local school children to see the motion picture, "Flagship of the Air."

Car Hits Pedestrian

Left alone in his mother's parked car in the 600 block of F street northwest yesterday, a 14-year-old boy stepped on the starter.

The car moved forward and struck Lillian Harbin, 36, of 908 M street northwest. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for injuries to both legs.

Church of the Week

Cornerstone to Be Laid Today By Clarendon Methodists

Cornerstone to be laid today for the new $100,000 church and educational building of Clarendon (Va.) Methodist Church, at Sixth and Irving and Ivy streets north. The addition on the far left (arrow) is not included in present plans. It will be a Young People's Building

By Robert Tate Allan

The congregation of the Clarendon (Va.) Methodist Church will realize a long-cherished ambition today when the cornerstone is laid for the new $100,000 church and educational building.

Many religious leaders of Arlington County will take part in the exercises, among them Dr. A. P. Williams, superintendent of the Alexandria District of the Virginia Conference, Methodist Church, bringing the principal address; the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of Clarendon Baptist Church, and the Rev. C. M. Hesser, vice president of the Board of Missions and Church Extension, the conference, and pastor of Del Ray Methodist Church.

Greetings will be heard from the Rev. Walter M. Lockett, jr., president of the Arlington County Ministerial Association, and the Rev. Thomas G. Betschler, president of the Arlington County Religious Education Council.

Old Site for Sale

The Rev. George G. Oliver, pastor of the Clarendon Methodist Church, will present a statement and introductions; Worshipful Master Henry B. Cole and the Columbia Lodge, No. 285, A. F. of A. M. of Virginia, will lay the cornerstone, and Dr. Lewis F. Havermale, pastor of Arlington Methodist Church, will give the benediction.

The ceremonies set for 3 p. m., will take place at Sixth and Irving and Ivy streets north, four blocks from the present church, which, with the parsonage, is offered for sale.

The new building, the third in the 35-year-old history of the Clarendon Methodist Church, will provide adequate facilities for the rapidly growing congregation—pacing the phenomenal growth of Arlington County.

During its first conference year, 1912-13, it had a membership of 101, a church building valued at $4,000, a Sunday school enrollment of 166, and had raised $1,526 for all purposes that year.

Enrollment Now 693

At the close of the conference year in October, 1939, the church enrollment was 693; the church school, 660, and the amount raised for the year, $11,506. The total property value today is $57,500.

The first floor will contain a sanctuary with choir loft and chancel; choir rooms and pastor's study; classrooms for adults and beginners' departments; a nursery, vestibule and other features.

The second floor will have a gallery reached by stairways leading from the Narthex in front of the sanctuary. The gallery will be used to increase the seating capacity of the church and during the Sunday school sessions will be utilized by the Men's Bible Class.

In the basement will be a social hall with accommodations for 300 people. It will be used on Sunday morning and evenings for the worship services of the young people's division. That floor also will contain a modern-equipped stage, to the left of which will be two classrooms for younger adults. The kitchen will be on the right of the stage platform.

Planned for erection in the near future is a complete young people's building, with social hall, classrooms and many other feautres. It will be on the left of the proposed present edifice.

Three Years Pastor

Linder & Parks are architects, and Dr. Henry E. Tralle is consultant for the new project, the building committee for which includes the Rev. Mr. Oliver, Stanley N. Collins, chairman, W. M. Whitlock, chairman of the finance subcommittee; H. L. Caton, O. L. Day, E. R. Hagan, W. W. Hohein, Mrs. J. L. Robinson, A. H. Tillson, Mrs. A. E. Wilson, R. A. Pearson, chairman of the planning sub committee; Mrs. J. C. Boss, A. W. Harrell, Mrs. A. W. Harrell, A. M. McDaniel and J. A. Woodward.

The new building will mark the third edifice built during pastorates of the Rev. Mr. Oliver, who came to his present post in October, 1936, after a ministry at the First Methodist Church fo Hyattsville, Md. He once studied architecture, but later decided to enter the ministry.

According to the pastor, the splendid support of his congregation has made possible the materialization of the present project.

Stewards Listed

The board of stewards includes H. L. Caton, chairman, W. M. Whitlock, vice chairman; O. L. Day, financial secretary; R. P. Bashaw, R. J. Brazil, V. E. Burner, Rector Byrne, W. H. Cheesman, Hobart Clough, S. N. Collins, W. N. Cradlin, R. G. Dise, W. S. Eisenlohr, jr., E. P. Fielding, Frank Golden, Dr. Hagen, A. W. Harrell, J. E. Harris, W. W. Hohein, S. E. Hollenbeck, Thomas Loy, J. L. McFeaters, H. O. Martin, N. C. Michael, Hamilton Myers, E. W. Pumphrey, L. E. Putnam, J. L. Robinson, A. F. Stevens, A. H. Tillson, C. E. Upperco, F. L. Vannier, C. E. Washburn, jr., and J. A. Woodward.

Mr. Woodward is chairman of Christian education, while officers of the school are Williams S. Eisenlohr, general superintendent, and J. V. Sasher, secretary. Departmental leaders are Mrs. A. W. Harrell, A. H. Tillson, Miss Bessie Blincoe, Charles Hamilton, S. Earl Hollenback, Mrs. G. A. Hooven, Mrs. G. H. Parker, Mrs. N. T. Farmer and Mrs. P. H. Underwood.

Mrs. H. A. Brentlinger heads the Woman's Missionary Society, and Mrs. G. H. Parker, the Council of Missions and Church Extension. Leonard F. Nichols is organist-choir director.

Mt. Vernon Place To Hold 'Sing'

An old-fashioned "sing" will feature services tomorow at 8 p. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, where Dr. John W. Rustin will preach on "Our Drink Problem."

The clergyman will speak at 11 a. m. on "My Gospel." The choir, under Deane Shure, will sing "Roll, Chariot, Roll," by Cain, and the mixed quartet will have O'Hara's "Step by Step" as offertory.

The younger adult department, meeting at 7 p. m., will hear the Rev. John L. Mixon, director of the social welfare department, Washington Federation of Churches, speak.

Msgr. M. J. Ready To Address Forum

The Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, will address the Critics' Forum final meeting of the season on Thursday at 8:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. "The Catholic Crisis," by George Seldes, will be discussed.

Matthew F. McGuire, assistant attorney general, will be chairman for the evening.

Opportunity will be given for questions and discussions after the review.

Choir Festival On Thursday At Cathedral

Event Climaxes 2-Day Conference On Church Music

A boy choir festival will be held at the Washington Cathedral on the night of Ascension Day, Thursday, climaxing a two-day conference on church music, and coinciding with the National Cathedral Association's annual meeting.

Dr. T. Tertius Noble, eminent musician and organist of St. Thomas' Church in New York City, will conduct the service, in which the participating choirs and directors will be the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, Sherman J. Kreuzberg; St. John's Episcopal, Georgetown, E. William Brackett, and Washington Cathedral, Paul Callaway.

The music will include "Magnificant and Nunc Dimittis in F Minor," by Mr. Callaway; "If Ye Love Me," by Thomas Tallis; "Greater Love," by John Ireland; "O Hear Thou From Heaven" (Gloria Domini), by Dr. Noble; "Lord of the Worlds Above" (first performance), by Dr. Noble; "Let My Prayer Come Up Into Thy Presence," by Henry Purcell. Dr. Noble's anthem, "Lord of the Worlds Above," is one of his most recent compositions, and is dedicated to the organist of the cathedral.

The bishop of Washington, the dean and the canons of the Cathedral, the Rev. Paul D. Wilbur, rector of the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, and the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church, will participate.

The service will be preceded by a conference on church music for Episcopal organists and choirmasters on Wednesday in the parish house of St. Albans Church. The leaders will be Dr. Noble, who will hold a discussion on the training of boy choirs; Ray F. Brown, director of music at the General Theological Seminary, New York City, who will read a paper on "Simple Music for Small Choirs and Congregations," and the Rev. John W. Norris, of Philadelphia, whose subject will be "Worship."

Catholic Students' Mission Crusade Conclave To Celebrate Its 10th Anniversary May 5

The Catholic University Conference of Clerics and Religious of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, will mark its tenth anniversary on Sunday, May 5, with impressive rites.

Solemn high mass will be celebrated at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception and awards given conference members for outstanding work in the mission crusade.

Two members of the original executive board will participate in the services. They will be the Rev. Samuel Cummings, S. A., deacon of the mass, and the Rev. Samuel J. Matthews, S. S. J., sub-deacon, assisting Msgr. Louis C. Vaeth, celebrant.

A former president of the conference, Brother M. Andre Lawrence, of the Missionary Servants of the Most Holy Trinity, will serve as master of ceremonies. The Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., Dean of the Catholic University School of Philosophy, who ten years ago was chairman of the mission rally marking the foundation of the conference, will preach, and Augustinian seminarians will sing. Frater Timothy Donahue, S. A., conference president, will recite the crusaders' pledge, which will be renewed by the conference members.

Most Catholic schools have units of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, whose purpose is the study of the church's mission work and the spiritual and financial aid of missionaries.

Such units have long existed in the religious houses of Catholic University, but there special emphasis is placed on the missions assigned to those houses. Realization of the value of coordinating the work of the unit resulted in the formation of the conference.

The idea of cooperation was first broached at the national convention of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade at Catholic University in the summer of 1929. To carry out the idea, members of the Immaculate Conception unit of the Dominican House of Studies invited members of other religious communities to a meeting at the Dominican House. Interest grew, and the meeting was supplanted by a mission rally at the university in 1930.

At that time Msgr. Vaeth, archdiocesan director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, proposed the formation of a conference. The clerical conference was born, and has since grown to 32 crusade units with more than 1,100 members.

Leaders of the conference yesterday explained its aims as being to "promote corporate activity so that the individual efforts of the separate units might be multiplied by the assistance of others."

It also aims to stimulated "inter-unit activity so that the spirit of missionary fraternity might be generated and preserved among the members of missionary congregations" and to provide "authentic information about missions."

Each year the conference sponsors the principal public observance in America of the church unity octave, a period of eight days of prayer for union of Christian churches. It also sponsors the annual archdiocesan oratorical and poster contests. The finals are being held tomorrow in the Seton High School, Baltimore.

A youth rally for peace, with 5,000 students and clerics taking part in a colorful parade down Constitution avenue, was held last April 30. It was one of the largest youth peace demonstrations ever seen here.

Other members of the present executive board are the Rev. Mr. John McGee, C. S. C.; Brother Marcellus Scheur, O. Carm.; Brother Donald O'Callaghan, O. Carm.; the Rev. Louis Rongioni, O. S. A.; Brother Gerard Fredericks, M. S. SS. T., and Frater Aubert Reilly, O. F. M.

As rector of the university, the Most Rev. Joseph Corrigan, is honorary president of the conference; the vice rector, the Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, is faculty adviser, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Joseph Fenton, of the School of Sacred Sciences.

Bible Class Plans Annual Banquet May 28

The Smith Rucker Baraca Bible Class, Clarendon (Va.) Methodist Church, one of the most rapidly-growing and active groups in the suburban area, will hold its annual banquet on May 28, with outstanding men as the principal speakers.

The present membership of the class, of which J. J. Neely is teacher and S. D. Laughlin, president, is 125, with an average of more than 75 per cent attending the Sunday sessions.

Among its formers teachers of the group, formed in 1916 with 20 members, have been A. S. Woodland, J. H. Criswell, B. B. McNeeley, Marvin Robinson, the late Smith Rucker and the Rev. Perry Mitchell, pastor.

One of its most outstanding leaders was the late Mr. Rucker, elected regular teacher in 1926 and continuing until his death in 1929. Mr. Neely succeeded him. The Rev. F. J. Lukens is assistant teacher.

Calvary Methodist Class to Dine May 8

The Men's class of Calvary Methodist Church, Columbia road near Fifteenth street northwest, will stage its annual dinner on May 8, with Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, as principal speaker. Class elections are set.

Mrs. Walter C. Lowdermilk, for more than 20 years missionary to China, will address the annual banquet of the Dr. Samuel Domer Bible Class of St. Paul's Lutheran Church on Thursday at 6:30 p. m. "Reliving Bible Stories in the Twentieth Century" will be her theme.

Organized 36 years ago as a memorial to a former pastor for whom it was named, it has had only one teacher, Dr. Harry T. Domer, son of that clergyman. The class gave the church $250 at Easter, bringing their contributions during the past ten years to more than $4,000. Mrs. H. M. Heckman is president.

Greek Rites Commemorate Christ's Burial

Heralding the Greek Orthodox celebration of Easter tonight at midnight, hundreds of members of Washington's Hellenic community last night packed the Church of SS. Constantine and Helen for rites commemorating Christ's burial.

Led by the Greek Minister to the United States, Cimon Diamantopoulos, the devout worshiped in the presence of a floral-bedecked canoy bearing the symbolic body of Christ. Later in the services the canopy was borne through the aisles by four men.

Children Strew Roses

Before it walked the Rev. Thomas Daniels, pastor of the church at Sixth and C streets southwest. Behind it came the Greek Minister. On either side stepped white-dressed children, strewing roses from baskets.

Before leading the procession, Father Daniels stood in front of the canopy to offer prayers for the well-being of leaders of the Nation, for his congregation and for the world in general.

Earlier, the youngsters stood flanking the canopy on the rostrum, where the worshipers came forward at intervals to light their small tapers and to kiss the statue of Christ resting in a bower of white lilies, roses and green ferns. Behind the canopy stood a tall cross, candles flickering on it, and adorned with a wreath.

Use Julian Calendar

Special guest chanter was George Garides, of Smyrna, who led the singing of the Byzantine portion of the program, presented without any accompaniment. The choir was directed by John Demetrades.

Because they calculate the holiday according to the Julian calendar, the Greek Church has the observance a month later than the usual date.

The third conference of the Fellowship of States, comprising Baptist women from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and the District, will meet in Calvary Baptist Church on Tuesday and Wednesday. "Light" will be the theme.

DR. DECKER

As the parley opens, Mrs. Gove G. Johnson, wife of the pastor of National Baptist Memorial Church, will offer devotions; Mrs. J. G. Yaden, president of the Baptist Home Missionary Union of the District, will bring greetings, and Miss Alice W. S. Brimson, speaks. She is executive secretary of the Woman's American Baptist Home Missionary Society.

Miss Ruth Dickey will describe the work in Belgian Congo, from which station she has just returned.

Dr. William S. Abernethy, host pastor and president of the Washington Ministerial Association, will conduct devotions at the Tuesday night sessions, at which Dr. J. W. Decker, foreign secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, will speak on "Christ on the Scene of Crisis."

A panel discussion will feature the All-Workers' Conference on Wednesday morning, conducted by Mrs. Howard Wayne Smith, president of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society. In the afternoon local churchwomen will present a pageant, "Following the Sunrise," authored by Mrs. Carleton M. Long. A fellowship dinner is set for Tuesday at 6 p. m.

Methodists Decree Day to Fast And Pray for End of War

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, April 26.—The General Conference of the Methodist Church today called upon all its 7,856,000 members in the United States to do without Sunday dinner on June 2 and pray for "speedy termination of war."

The 776 conference delegates resolved to set the example by doing likewise this Sunday and contributing the money they would have spent to a fund "for the relief of human suffering."

"The first Sunday in June," their resolution read, "is hereby designated as a day of self-denial, fasting and prayer throughout the Methodist Church.

"We urge that every Methodist follow the example of the General Conference in making a sacrificial offering. We regard this period of fasting . . . as a preparation for further sacrifices to be made during the continuation of this period of critical human need."

They resolved the fast day should be "a time of deep intercession for the suffering multitudes of other lands, and of earnest petition for the speedy termination of war and the establishment of a just and lasting peace."

Today delegates debated about where the new Methodist Church's administrative boards and commissions should be located. They rejected, temporarily at least, recommendations of the small commission on location appointed at Kansas City a year ago.

The commission on location, headed by Dr. Umphry Lee, president of Southern University, Dallas, Tex., wanted the commission on world peace and the board of lay activities to be in Chicago. But a group led by Chester A. Smith, of Peekskill, N. Y., wanted these two located in Washington "in the same building with the Board of Temperance."

Dr. Lee's commission had recommended placing the board of education, the commission on evangelism and the commission on courses of study in Nashville, Tenn.; the Commission on World Service in Chicago; the Board of Pensions in both Chicago and St. Louis; the Board of Hospitals in Columbus, Ohio; the Board of Missions in New York and the Board of Trustees in Cincinnati. Smith said there were "numerous objections" to these recommendations.

Council Official Due to Discuss Mission Plans

With the arrival in Washington on Monday of Dr. Guy Black, of the department of church attendance and visitation evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches in America, for conference with leaders here, definite plans will be outlined for that important phase of the National Christian Mission, which is to be held here from February 2 to 9, 1941.

Dr. Black will confer at the Washington Federation of Churches headquarters, 1749 N street northwest, with a group consisting of Dr. R. H. Miller, pastor of National City Christian Church and general chariman of the committee on arrangements for the coming mission; Dr. W. L. Darby, secretary; Dr. Horace E. Cromer, pastor of Emory Methodist Church and chairman of the church attendance and visitation evangelism committee; and other ministers and laymen chosen from the five areas of metropolitan Washington.

"We are fortunate in having a man of Dr. Black's ability come to us at this time to discuss and help in the completion of plans for carrying out this effort," Dr. Darby said.

Dr. Darby explained that Dr. Black is now making a tour of 22 major cities where the National Christian Missions are to be held, under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches and the local federation of churches. Dr. Black will return again next fall for a week or so, to instruct further the committees in their campaign to build up church attendance and to increase interest in spiritual matters.

Dr. Black will be here at the time of the mission. Dr. Darby said, to assist in its purpose and to aid in planning for the intensive follow-up effort which will be made immediately after the close of the mission to develop a continued church attendance. For this purpose the city is being divided into church areas and different groups and committees will work in each of these areas.

U. S. Officials Lean to War, Dr. Walsh Says

Georgetown Regent Discusses International Affairs in Lecture

Despite public denials from high places, the spirit of official America inclines toward war, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its School of Foreign Service, said yesterday. He spoke in the last of a series of 16 lectures at Continental Hall.

"What seems fairly certain," he said, ". . . is that an organized drive will be loosed in the near future against the Johnson Act, which prohibits loans or credits to England and France. It will not come, however, until after next November. Should it succeed, the path to war is reopened along the old pattern."

That a fear that Secretary Hull's warning to Japan on aggression against the Netherlands' possessions in the South Pacific was more than a reminder of her treaty obligations exists in official quarters "was revealed recently by a high naval officer, Admiral Taussig," he said. Taussig's "forthright" declaration that war with Japan is inevitable is a disturbing revelation of the fire smoldering in many breasts."

"The prompt repudiation of the admiral, both by his immediate superiors and by the State Department," Dr. Walsh added, "may serve to temper the incident, but it does not destroy the latent menace."

Dr. Walsh traced modifications of traditional American diplomacy, with abandonment of the freedom of the seas policy, amendment of the concept of neutrality and no entangling alliances and enlargement of the open door in China policy to embrace the entire south Pacific. As to neutrality:

"No longer is it deemed advisable or honorable for the Government of the United States to remain impartial, neutral and evenhanded in respect to the belligerent powers of Europe. On the contrary, both the President and Mr. Hull, in their State papers, in periodic statements, public addresses and private conversations, make frequent and clear distinction between the peace-loving countries and aggressor powers, with easy identification of the respective characters. . . .

"It would appear, therefore, that responsible American authorities believe absolute neutrality no longer obligatory as a controlling principle in the present conflict."

Finals Tomorrow In Archdiocese Oratory Contest

Baltimore, April 26 (AP).—Final contests will be held here Sunday night in the eighth annual oratorical competition for high school students of the Catholic Archdiocese of Baltimore and Washington.

"Personal Views on Religious Vocations" will be the subject of the addresses. The winner will receive $50 and right to possession for a year of the Archbishop Curley Trophy, now held by Miss Doris Pettit, of Washington.

The five finalists, representing the five conferences of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, are:

$35,355 Is Raised In Mission Drive

Captains of teams in the Central Union Mission drive for $100,000 to build an annex reported $4,486 at a dinner at Calvary Baptist Church last night, bringing the total subscribed so far to $35,355.

Silver cups for highest scores went to C. E. Bogardus, of the men's division, and Miss Ella P. Tilley, of the women's teams. Red ribbons, for subscriptions totaling $100, were awarded Mrs. Clifford Lewis, Miss Mary Anna Alkire, Miss Ethel Shirks, Miss Effie Broadnax, Miss Mabel Hutchins, Miss Helen Boss and Mrs. Ellwood Spalding.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
Its poetic excellence—fervent appeal—and thrilling optimism have made this a missionary hymn of matchless popularity. Like many other great hymns, it was written at one sitting, with no thought that English speaking peoples all over the world would use it in praise to their Creator.

Giddy Comedy Holds Screen At the Earle

By Richard L. Coe

"THE DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE." Columbia picturization of a screen play by George Seaton and Ken England, costarring Loretta Young and Ray Milland, with Reginald Gardiner, Gail Patrick, Edmund Gwenn, Frank Sully, Gordon Jones, Georges Metaxa, Charles Halton, Joseph Eggenton, Paul McAllister, Chester Clute, Hal K. Dawson and Edward Van Sloan. Directed by Alexander Hall. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

"The Doctor Takes a Wife," the Earle's new feature, is one of those giddy comedies which try terribly hard to be very funny and succeed on occasions in being fairly amusing. On the stage, Gus Van and Roy Smeck head Harry Anger's second annual streamlined minstrels, "Gentlemen, Be Seated."

Taking its cue from those career women who turn out such bachelor-girliana as "Live Alone and Like It" and "Fashion Is Spinach." "The Doctor Takes a Wife" would have you believe that Loretta Young is the rising young author of something to do with spinsters and spinach who treats men with sneering insolence. So nasty is the luscious Miss Young as this bachelor-girl that if everyone did not automatically know that the nicest people are bachelor-girls pro tem, her portrait might make of her audience a maelstrom of brooding malcontents. But, like hard water with the proper soap, she softens.

Amusing Minor Incidents

It takes most of the footage to do it. By the bitterest chance, circumstances make her seem married to a serious-minded, lanky Ray Milland, a medico whose heart is already attached and to another insufferable female, too, this one played by Gail Patrick. If they continue to seem married (observe the seem, please) Ray will continue to be a full-fledged professor, Loretta's book will make money for her and preserve the balance for Reginald Gardiner's slippery publishing house.

This mockery is carried out in most of its implications with much dashing about in proper bedroom-farce manner. The playing is nothing to set the skyrockets blazing, but it is pleasantly sufficient once you get on to the idea that the things Miss Young says are supposed to be sophisticated.

The real laughs in the film are little touches: quartets from the rival telegraph companies arriving a few bars apart to greet the "bride and bridegroom" with gleeful song; a couple of tackles who want to play Fordham, and Milland getting his leg tickled by Miss Young, hidden for very good reason in the bottom of his car.

Roy Smeck Scores

To "Gentlemen, Be Seated," Gus Van, Lou Lubin, "Slim" Timblin, Roy Smeck and the singing Virginians bring the minstrelsy, while the reliable Roxyettes supply the streamlining. In front of an "Old Kentucky Home" setting and in brightly gay costumes, the show opens swiftly and zips toward a snappy finish.

Roy Smeck's electrical guitar blends particularly well with the "mike" and is the most effective offering in the revue, his middle number, "When You Wish Upon a Star," being prettily illustrated by the girls. Those Hudson Wonders are back, too, and go through their expert leapings with enviable assurance. Van's dialect songs climax the minstrels with a loudly appreciative hand from the audience.

Paramount News, with a striking lack of war clips, completes the bill.

Edna May's Trailer

Edna May Oliver has solved the dressing room problem. Like Mary's little lamb, the trailer she bought follows her everywhere, and the trailer houses her dressing room. "It's really much simpler," she says. "I have all my things in it, and I don't have to move them all the time. It may make me look like a wanderer, but I'm comfortable in it."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

"Strange Cargo," at Palace, Is Livid Melodrama; Rich and Rowdy Mix It in "Johnny Apollo," Capitol

Gable and Crawford Costar in Drama Of Penal Colony; Shorts Entertain

"STRANGE CARGO." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel, "Not Too Narrow—Not Too Deep," by Richard Sale, adapted to the screen by Lawrence Hazard, costarring Clark Gable and Joan Crawford, with Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre, Paul Lukas, Albert Dekker, J. Edward Bromberg, Eduardo Ciannelli, John Arledge and Victor Varconi. Directed by Frank Borzage. At Loew's Palace.

"Strange Cargo," founded on Richard Sale's novel of "Not Too Narrow—Not Too Deep," and revealed for the first time on a Washington screen yesterday at Loew's Palace Theater, is at base a livid and turbulent melodrama. Woven through it and largely mollifying its various mental and physical brutalities are the gentle speeches and compassionate acts of a mystical character that is largely the counterpart of the figure of The Stranger in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." These contrasting elements lend the play a peculiar impressiveness.

BELL

In picturizing Lawrence Hazard's screen adaptation of the Sale book, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has gone far beyond the usual boundaries of conventionally realistic drama. They have stressed every craven attribute of a desperate band of felons who escape from a penal colony in the Guianas, softening none of the most vicious qualities of their complete moral and spiritual degeneration. The gradual redemption of the "strange cargo" of seven criminal refugees, making their way to the mainland in a small sailboat, gains in forcefulness and tense dramatic effect as the Christ-like guidance of Cambreau finally brings out something of the good in each of the hopeless and defiant derelicts.

Is Superlatively Acted

The action is punctuated by a multiplication of all the murderously infamous incidents usually found in the gory tales of prison-island rebellion — fights, flight through a death-strewn jungle, murder, bitter personal feuds and all the other manifestations of human degradation. Yet, as I say, after the opening sequences there is that constant virtue of slow redemption. It is an odd combination.

The costellar roles of Verne, the toughest and most self-reliant of the escaping convicts, and Julie, the dance hall girl, exiled from the island for infraction of its military rules, are played completely in the minor key of the picture by Clark Gable and Joan Crawford. Each makes a memorable figure of a character that is not wholly despicable, once time and tribulation have had a chance to bring out its inherent worth. The supporting, all-male cast is one of practically perfect selection.

The kindly and understanding role of Cambreau is played with quiet restraint by Ian Hunter; Albert Dekker is maliciously competent as Moll, Verne's bitterest and most malignant enemy. Peter Lorre is the ubiquitous stool pigeon, who will sell out his best friend for money, and Paul Lukas is cast as a gentlemanly degenerate whose specialty is marrying wealthy women, who mysteriously disappear shortly thereafter. Eduardo Ciannelli, John Arledge and Victor Varconi are others who contribute handsomely to an unhandsome but vividly crimson film.

"Seattle, Gateway to the Pacific," a bit of scenic exploration; Robert Benchley's utterly ridiculous —and largely true—"Home Movies" and a new issue of "News of the Day" augment a major feature you may not fancy, but will not soon forget.

Rich Man-Gangster Film Play Costars Power and Lamour; Sullivan Revue Clicks

"JOHNNY APOLLO." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Samuel G. Engel and Hal Long, adapted to the screen by Philip Dunne and Rowland Brown, costarring Tyrone Power and Dorothy Lamour, with Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan, Charley Grapewin, Lionel Atwill, Marc Lawrence, Jonathan Hale, Russell Hicks, Fuzzy Knight, Charles Lane, Selmar Jackson, Charles Trowbridge, William Pawley, George Irving and others. At Loew's Capitol.

Emphasizing the Loew penchant for violent drama this week, the Capitol discloses for the first time in Washington the Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of "Johnny Apollo," adapted by Philip Dunne and Rowland Brown from an original story by Samuel G. Engel and Ha' Long. Not quite so grim and terrifying as "Strange Cargo," at the Palace, this metropolitan melodrama reverts to the gangster era in films—with slight modifications.

"Johnny Apollo" concerns itself principally with the son of a millionaire stock broker sent up the river for embezzlement. Unable to secure or hold employment as a result of the stigma his father has placed upon the family name, Robert Cain, Jr., becomes the Johnny Apollo of a gang of hoodlums who pay him big money for the aid they feel he can be to their racket as an aristocratic "front." "Lucky," the favorite night club singer of Mickey Dwyer, head of the mob, and "Judge" Brennan, his shady, dipsomaniac "mouthpiece," are the only ones who perceive that the new member of their syndicate is working solely for the parole and eventual clearing of his father. So they are on his side.

Comes Out Right Side Up

In this fact lies the principal reason that "Johnny Apollo" becomes a wild and bullet and icepick riddled murder drama before it has gone very far. There is an attempted jailbreak here, too, but it doesn't come off quite so successfully as the one in "Strange Cargo." The ultimate results, nevertheless, are much the same. The girl and his dad are waiting for Johnny in a shiny new car when the gates finally swing open for him.

This item, too, is conspicuously well played. Tyrone Power, in the title role, is cast on the criminal side for the first time since "Jesse James" and plays his part honestly, naturally and effectively. Edward Arnold is the paternal cause of it all, Lloyd Nolan, on a par with Humphrey Bogart in big city thuggery, does handsomely by Mickey Dwyer; Dorothy Lamour is "Lucky," singing two songs in the night club scenes that interrupt the shooting, and Charley Grapewin is at his best as the bibbling and tricky lawyer who gets the icepick through his heart for his skill. All of those whose names appear in small type at the top of these remarks render varying measures of excellent support.

"Stardust Cavalcade" a Hit

Ed Sullivan's "Stardust Cavalcade," on the Capitol stage this week, is the best of the "Hollywood star" revues that have come along this season. Every member of the troupe is a competent performer and their ensemble finale is a "wow," no less. Betty Jaynes and Douglass McPhail are known quantities as soprano and barytone, from "Sweethearts" and "Babes in Arms." It turns out that Marjorie Weaver and Helen Parrish can sing, too. Arthur Treacher, Bela Lugosi and Master of Ceremonies Sullivan keep a steady stream of comedy flowing and the dancing is ably accounted for by Vivien Fay, ballet artiste, and Walter Long, who has graduated from Capitol usher and "Going Native" to a big-time tap dancer with a Warner Brothers contract. Sullivan also has his own illustrated monologue devoted to flashes of the earliest stars of the "movies." The act moves smoothly with a genuine professional polish.

Will Rogers memorial reel and the Fox Movietone News complete a bill that is no place to go for a nap.

Columbia

It is healthy, encouraging news that "The Grapes of Wrath" is considered "commercial" enough for a third week on F street, Darryl F. Zanuck's notable screen transcription of the John Steinbeck novel reopened yesterday at the Columbia Theater after an extended run at the Palace.

Whether or not one believes what "The Grapes of Wrath" describes is true, is quite beside the point in recognizing that here is a superb film-play, powerfully directed and played so sincerely as to beggar criticism. The characterizations are so finely drawn, the incidents so warmly human, that the film becomes a far finer work on the screen than it was as a novel. More restrained in language and technique, its point is achieved less sensationally but with even more forceful impact. Henry Fonda's Tom Joad and Jane Darwell's Ma are truly memorable figures in this story of the dust-plagued "Oakies" who hope to find a land of promise in the orchards of California.

Charley Grapewin, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Russell Simpson, Zeffie Tilbury and John Qualen head the supporting cast of principals, brilliantly directed by "The Informer's" John Ford. To miss "The Grapes of Wrath" would be to miss one of the great films the screen has produced.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 26.

SENATOR VANDENBERG: Your rival, Tom Dewey, will make his next important speech in Wichita, within a few days —a speech wherein he will disavow any support from bigoted groups and in which he will make a plea for religious tolerance . . . Metropolitan Opera Company: Lawrence Tibbett has been placed under a "silent treatment" by his doctor, because of throat trouble. Tibbett won't utter a single word for two weeks . . . Attorney General Bennett: Louis Pink, State superintendent of insurance, will announce an investigation of private insurance companies, concerning compensation abuses . . . William Green: George Scalise, whose indictment was revealed in this column last week, knew it was coming and asked two noted labor lawyers to represent him—but they refused.

SENATOR O'MAHONEY: The larger banks are beginning to sell branch offices to smaller banks. Two such institutions already have completed the sales . . . John Barrymore: Herbert Hoover, who couldn't attend the 4 A's dinner Sunday night, to see you and the other stars entertain, bought a box for $165—and asked that ten impoverished actors be invited as guests . . . Clifton Fadiman: Oscar Levant is going to Hollywood for four weeks on May 1, to appear in the new Bing Crosby picture. Oscar turned down lucrative offers to make a lecture tour. "I couldn't lecture," he explained, "because my point of view changes in the middle of a sentence and I'd be frightened."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY O'DWYER: Fred Kaplan, the bridge champion who was defense counsel for Lepke, was asked to represent some of the men you indicated in the Murder, Inc., cases. Kaplan asked for time to consider it, and went to the Cavendish Bridge Club, where he proceeded to conduct a crime quiz. He asked Baron von Zedtwitz, Oswald Jacoby, and other bridge champs who congregate there, to identify the following: "The Dasher," "Gangi," "The Jerk" and "Kid Twist." Each was properly identified by all present . . . And so Kaplan notified the prisoners that he would not act as their defense counsel.

DARRYL ZANUCK: Louis Bromfield, as a good-will gesture, plans to go to Rio for four months . . . Sinclair Lewis: Your wife, Dorothy Thompson, will have some difficulty re-entering Italy on her way back to America, because of her recent dispatches . . . Robert H. Jackson: B. Thompkins and W. Brower, who prosecuted the New York Title cases, are resigning to enter private practice . . . Lord Lothian: Noel Coward, who will arrive here shortly, will make a series of sponsored broadcasts. The deals now are being negotiated for him.

FCC: Andre Kostelanetz and his wife, Lily Pons, have been speaking—via an amateur short-wave set owned by one of their friends—to another friend in South America. The conversations usually were lengthy ones and very frequently there would be interferences from other amateur broadcasters. Miss Pons thereupon announced, "This is Lily Pons"—start singing and the interference immediately would stop—while every amateur short-waver listened.

COMMISSIONER CAREY: The selling price for Sanita Lodge—the Otto Kahn estate which was to be sold to your Department of Sanitation for $100,000 and which was purchased last week by a private realty company—was the same figure $100,000 . . . Alec Woollcott: Elmer Davis, who loves traveling by plane, resents the advertisements in which you indorse Pullman travel and announce that you travel only by Pullman. Davis is advocating a counter-campaign: "Travel by Air—and Avoid Woollcott" . . . AGVA: Vaudeville will be revived at the Rivoli Theater, for the run of the Bing Crosby-Gloria Jean film, "If I Had My Way."

KENNETH SIMPSON: Senator Taft, whom you brought to the Inner Circle dinner last Saturday, was introduced to a young man who was described as "a very smart and prominent New Yorker" . . . "How do you do?" Taft acknowledged amiably. "New Yorker, eh? Tell me—what do you think of the St. Lawrence Ship Canal?" . . . "It's won-wonderful," stammered the startled New Yorker . . . "But what about the people in Buffalo?" Taft persisted . . . "Oh, those people?" was the reply. "Th-they're won-wonderful, too."

DENIS ROOSEVELT EXPEDITION: When you visit Africa again Harry Richman would like you to bring him two Ubangis, because he has a swell gag. It's about two Ubangis meeting and the first one says "Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers. Now you fan me."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, April 26.

I loved the frankness of Ruth Gordon, who got so many bouquets for her swell work in "Magic Bullet of Dr. Ehrlich."

She wrote me: "I know of nothing more engrossing than reading praise of oneself. I don't think anything has ever given me more happiness than to be a success in pictures. Failure I know about, and can accommodate my stride to it at a moment's notice. But success is something I've never been on too close terms with; and it's a pleasant sensation . . . You don't remember, but we met in the good old days at the old Three Arts Club, way back in 1914. Your name then was Elda Furry and you had a job. I don't remember whether it was good, bad, or with Mrs. Fiske, but it was a rare distinction for a Three Art Club girl.

HOPPER

"On the day before I met you I went to dinner at the Algonquin Hotel. I had never dined in a hotel before and it was the first time I ever ate oysters. And back in my hall bedroom that night I couldn't help but feel, as I reviewed the events of the evening, that I was scaling the heights pretty fact . . ."

"Brother Crews," the town character, is the man of the hour in Tucson. For years, Crews in his faded cutaway, slouch hat, has entertained tourists and home folks on the streets of Tucson with his fiddle. His appearance, sense of humor, and original remarks attracted Wesley Ruggles, now on location there for "Arizona," and you'll see him playing the part of the barber in that film—and using his own dialogue—which he couldn't do if they passed the Neely Bill.

Gene Raymond's two latest classical songs have been accepted by his publishers for immediate release. They are titled "I Would Slumber" and "Release." And what a lucky stiff Gene is to have Jeanette MacDonald as his song plugger —not to mention as his missus!

Wallace Beery didn't get that scarred face from his strenuous life in "Twenty-Mule Team" but on a fishing trip—of all things. Flying over the Grand Canyon, he parked his plane on a plateau and climbed down the canyon side to do some fishing. Suddenly came a landslide of sheer rock which carried off Wally's equipment and fish and he had to scale the face of it to get back to his plane. Nice restful sport —fishing!

Bob Hope says that he's finally met a Hollywood actor driving a station wagon who actually owns a ranch.

RKO-Keith's

Deanna Durbin is perpetuating the tradition locally associated with her name by continuing a third week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater in Universal's "It's a Date," her seventh consecutive hit.

Pronounced by many her finest film to date, "It's a Date" enlists many notables, including Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon, Eugene Pallette, Lewis Howard, Samuel S. Hinds, Cecilia Loftus, Fritz Feld, Henry Stephenson, Joe King, Virginia Brissac and Romaine Callender—not to mention Harry Owens and His Royal Hawaiians—in the star's support.

The story concerns an aging actress and her stage-struck daughter, both of whom fancy the same man. The locale of the action encompasses Maine, New York and Hawaii. William Seiter directed ably.

The new issue of "The March of Time" also continues on the Fifteenth street screen—the one devoted to the acute problems of American youth, some 21,000,000 of them.

"Seventeen" Is Metropolitan's Rib-Tickler

Tarkington Story Has Jackie Cooper And Betty Field

"SEVENTEEN." Paramount picturization of the story by Booth Tarkington, adapted to the screen by Agnes Christine Johnston and Stuart Palmer, costarring Jackie Cooper and Betty Field, with Otto Kruger, Ann Shoemaker, Norma Nelson, Betty Moran, Thomas Ross, Peter Hayes, Buddy Pepper, Donald Haines, Richard Benning, Jody S. Gilbert, Edward Earle, "Snowflake" and others. Directed by Louis King. At the Metropolitan.

"Growing pains" are just that to their possessor, but a million laughs to onlookers. So the Metropolitan audience is rocking with giggles this week as Jackie Cooper grows up in "Seventeen."

Jackie is the possessor of a jalloppy and a sweat shirt, both inscribed with high school wise cracks and autographs. But his soul is beginning to soar above such 'teenage symbols. He yearns to be "sophisticated," dreams of "women of the world."

Like the answer to his imaginings comes Betty Field, a young visitor from Chicago. Betty converses in terms of "Oh, but definitely!" and "Mahvelous!" Also her hard-hearted parents have just insisted on annulling her runaway marriage, apparently sent her to visit small-town relatives in an effort to cool her off. The thrilled and befogged Jackie says, "Gosh, she's practically a divorced woman!"—and falls for her like 10 tons of bricks.

Is Completely Cooked

Love has Jackie completely cooked, for the time being. His lady fair sneers at his jalloppy and he buys another, on time. Naturally, it's repossessed. She speaks casually of "white tie and tails," and he sneaks his father's 5-year-old dress suit to swank at a night club where the pair are humiliated by being refused drinks. All this takes money, and Jackie wangles money from his pals by promising them usurious interest. He's finally driven to sell his clothes to finance a party.

Though laughter is the keynote of "Seventeen," much tenderness and understanding of adolescence are implicit in its direction. The fine Booth Tarkington story has been brought up to 1940 by jitterbug dancing and "killer-diller" music. The entire picture is rich in amusing incidents and convincing family life.

Jackie's proposal to Betty Field is a proposal to stop all proposals. She's flattered him about his imitations of birds and animals, and he tells her that he figures that by making these sounds over the radio, he can make a living for both of them.

Cast Ranks High

Jackie Cooper does extremely well by himself as "Seventeen," in person. Betty Field, last seen in a phenomenal part in "Of Mice and Men," is perfect as the dizzy, "sophisticated" young object of his affections. Ann Shoemaker and Otto Kruger are both convincing and lovable as understanding parents, who do their best with Jackie's didoes. Little Norma Nelson, playing the "brat sister" proves herself a natural-born picture stealer.

A fat array of diverting shorts includes a Porky cartoon, another about the smartness of so-called dumb animals, a cowboy musical and a newsreel showing Spanish Loyalists settling in Mexico.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 26 (INS).—Wowie! What a cast for "The Ziegfeld Girl," talked about so long ago but now a reality with production set for June 15. Hedy Lamarr and Lana Turner, Hollywood's two top glamor girls; Eleanor Powell, premiere danseuse; Jimmie Stewart, Walter Pidgeon, George Murphy and Frank Morgan—each one a name in itself, will be on hand when the roll is called.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I'd say that Pandro Berman, who gets this as his first M-G-M assignment, has a cinch to make good with William Anthony McGuire's script and this line-up. Pan ought to do as well as he did with those early Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers pictures which won him his fame as a producer and were the best pictures he made when he was head man at RKO.

Surprised to hear that Eddie Mannix and Irving Asher are sailing for England Saturday. Some way, in these days of war we are always amazed when people leave the U. S. A. But business is business and Eddie goes because it is important for one of the big bosses to take a "busman's honeymoon—Robert Monigomery's British-made picture—and arrange to have it cut. While there, if conditions permit, the genial Irishman will negotiate to have other productions started. He will talk with Robert Donat on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and come back, I am glad to say, as soon as possible. The clipper is booked up solid until August, so Eddie and his traveling companion Asher, who knows England from A to Z, will go by boat.

I'm going to break down and confess there is a mote in my eye and I am really envious of Irene Dunne, who flies to Louisville to preview her picture, "My Favorite Wife," and remains over for the Kentucky Derby, suh! Not only will Irene make the jaunt but in the lucky group will be Garson Kanin, Leo McCary, Margaret Ettinger and Perry Lieber. Plenty of high doings are planned with Irene being the guest of the Governor of Kentucky for the entire week and she will also be present at the Stephen Foster memorial ceremonies. Randy Scott and Gail Patrick are also invited and will go, movie engagements permitting.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Dolores Del Rio, who hasn't been well for a long time, checked in at St. Vincent's Hospital for a tonsilectomy; Joan Fontaine, out for the first time since her serious operation, visiting Olivia de Havilland on the set. Olivia and Jimmie Stewart really dining and dancing tete-a-tete at Perino's Sky Room; Richard Arlen lost 25 pounds in ten days just by counting calories; Bette Davis having a swimming pool put on her lot in Toluca Lake while she is in Honolulu.

Barney Oldfield at the House of Murphy a second night and this time with his first wife; Rudy Vallee stagging it at the same place; Ilona Massey and Alan Curtis a Brown Derby duet; Dorothy Lamour wires from Honolulu that 15,000 people met her when her boat docked. We can believe that for Dorothy's the best ad with her sarong Honolulu ever had; Gloria Dickson leaves for Reno next week to take up residence. Wonder if the hurry to get a divorce from Perc Westmore has anything to do with her latest heart throb?

The Tom Brown-Anne Nagel romance is cold and he is now concentrating on Frances Robinson; Ernst Lubitsch, who has been very sick for some months, is being urged by his friends to go in the hospital for an operation that is not serious; Carole Landis and Willis Hunt, jr., are looking altarward, according to their friends.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Howard

The syncopated knowledge inherited in his swing studentship as leader of the late sepia master, Chick Webb's great orchestra, is predominantly evident in Bardu Ali and his band's musical performance as the top feature of the Howard stage revue this week. Combining all the elements of clever arranging, able directorship, and fine musicians, a new name stands revealed in swingdom. The revue itself is speedy and attractively costumed.

Opening with their original number, "Fast Mail," Ali and his boys bear down on "Running Wild," "Body and Soul," and a new interpretation of the now famous "Tuxedo Junction."

Warring Songbirds

The vocal war between songbirds Bobbe Caston and Beverly White finds them both in a draw at the gong, having returned for three encores apiece. Caston's brightest tune yesterday was "Call Me Darling," while the more plaintive-voiced Beverly White registered best with her "Faithful Forever."

Among lesser lights are the Harlem Highlanders, a half dozen kilted songsters, equally adept in hot harmony and hoofing; the Step Brothers, a frock-coated quartet of stylish steppers; Duke Jenkins, who should be classed as a foot-loose jitterbug; popular comedians, Mason and Vigel; and Edna Mae Harris, dynamic soubrette, and the Addison Carey chorines.

On the screen, "The Lone Wolf Strikes" stars Warren William as a former criminal who now devotes his genius to crime solving.

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, APRIL 27, 1940 17

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The safest Kentucky Derby wager we know would be a parlay on (1) Bimelech to win the race and (2) Col. E. R. Bradley to register the least concern of any of the 70,000 at the track when the Derby field parades to the post.

POVICH

Col. Bradley owns Bimelech and Bimelech may be the shortest-priced favorite in Derby history, but those twin facts won't disturb Bradley's outward air of detachment on Derby Day. For most of his 80 years he has been a gambler. He has the inscrutable face that is the badge of the Brahmins of his profession. The flip of a card that may cost him $20,000, the spin of a roulette wheel that may set him back even more—he's inured to gambling for high stakes.

In 1935 an ambitious young prosecutor for a Senate investigating committee summoned Col. Bradley to the witness stand and, thinking to embarrass the old gentleman, asked him, "And now, Mr. Bradley, what is your profession?"

Bradley didn't blink, but the prosecutor did when his witness replied with complete calm: "I'm a speculator. I'll gamble on anything."

Back in 1898 Bradley opened The Beach Club at Palm Beach, Fla. and that betting place has been, with horse racing, his chief interest for 40-odd years. He was the first operator of a de luxe betting casino to throw his roulette wheels open to women in America. He did that reluctantly and then realized that he had made a ten-strike. Women, he discovered, not only liked to gamble but their word-of-mouth advertising for his Casino was invaluable.

His fondness for horses is natural enough. When in his teens he drifted to the Southwest, became a cowboy and later a scout for the United States Army in the campaigns against the Apache Indians. The first bet he ever made was on the Indian pony races in the Southwest and the loss of that bet convinced him that he was on the wrong end of the betting business. He turned bookmaker on the tracks around Hot Springs and Memphis.

Between his gambling Casino at Palm Beach and his bookmaking activities he became a rich man at 40. He bought the Idle Hour stock farm in Kentucky in 1906 and turned to breeding. It was not unusual for him to plunge $10,000 or $20,000 in one bet on his own horses, although he does not bet in these amounts.

A bet that he used to make with exuberant purchasers of yearlings at Saratoga was to offer even money from $50 to $5,000 that the buyer of a yearling would never win a race with it as a 2-year-old. He used to bet, also, giving 5 to 1 odds, that you couldn't name a Kentucky Derby starter three months before the race.

It is related that Bradley made that offer to Harry Sinclair, owner of Zev, and Joshua Cosden, owner of Martingale, before the Derby in 1923. They each took it for $5,000 at 5 to 1. A week before the Derby, both horses were badly beaten in the Preakness. Their owners announced, nevertheless, that they would start in the Derby. Bradley resented that plan, feeling that Sinclair and Cosden were merely attempting to win their side bets without having a chance to win the Derby. He was wrong. Zev won the Derby and Martingale ran second.

There isn't a smarter operator in the racing business than Bradley. His four Derby winners attest to that. He always felt that the two greatest horses he ever owned were Bubbling Over and Blue Larkspur. But, strangely, Bimelech is not by either of those, but by Black Toney, one of his lesser-regarded stallions. On the distaff side, however, Bimelech is out of the mare La Troienne.

Smart as he is, and always recognized as a keen gambler whom stock promoters and sharpshooters never included on sucker lists, Bradley nevertheless has been a set-up for visionary horse-racing folks. He is susceptible when idea-men or rack-brained inventors pop up with schemes to "improve horses." Fifteen years ago one quack developed the theory that most horses suffered from poor vision. He sold the idea to Bradley and shortly thereafter turf patrons were startled to see a Bradley color-bearer going to the post with eyeglasses set in blinkers. It was no dice and Bradley abandoned that idea.

A few years later Bradley fell for another hare-brained scheme. He was told about streamlining and forthwith fell for the idea of equipping his horses with a new and improved blinker—one designed with a metal cone protruding from the head covering and supposed to cut down wind-resistance. He gave that the heave-ho within a few weeks.

He didn't offer any objections when Mrs. Bradley once devised a new betting system of her own. She told Bradley that henceforth she was betting $20 on every horse in each race but the favorite. Bradley arranged for her to bet with his own bookmaker. Then he instructed his bookie not to record the bets but to give him an accounting each day on the sums his wife won or lost and he would protect the bookie. Four days later, Mrs. Bradley had $20 riding on a horse named Wishing Ring, which won at 942 to 1. She was paid off $18,885 by her husband who never bothered to tell her he had booked the bet.

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 26 (INS).—YOU, TOO, CAN BE A SPORTS WRITER!

Tired of studying about air-conditioning and Diesel engines, fellows? Want to get into the big dough? Want people to stare at you on the street and say, "There goes Addison Sims, of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer?" Want to meet interesting people and earn while you learn? Well, then, fellows, tear out this handy coupon and send it to Bill McCormick, American Wildlife Institute, Investment Building, Washington, D. C.

CONSIDINE

This is no gag. The American Wildlife Institute is convinced that United States sports pages don't carry enough news and comment on fishing, hunting and wildlife. And it plans to remedy this by attempting what a lot of newspapers would scoff at—breed a sports writer.

If you are over 21 and under 35 years you may apply for this free year's training. You must have a degree in ecology (whatever the blazes that is) or field biology at some recognized college. It is desirable, too, that you have had two years' training in managing wildlife. If you live with a growing son, that will suffice.

Applicants must be interested in hunting and fishing and in field activities, and submit a sample of their writing. They must convince the Outdoor Writers Association of America that they are serious about all this. And they must demonstrate that their morals are beyond reproach—which will make the lucky winner the loneliest man in sports writing.

The winner will be sent to Washington and put on the pay roll of the American Wildlife Institute at $25 a week. There for eight months, he will be given instructions in writing newspaper, magazine and radio material on Wildlife. He will have a daily assignment that will take him to one of the Government offices interested in the great outdoors, and familiarizing himself with the Government's role in field and stream.

At the end of eight months the factory-made Runyon will be taken under wing by a member of the Outdoor Writers Association. The neophyte will observe just how the old hand works at the newspaper trade, where he gets his stuff, what kind of grip he uses on his scissors and paste-pot brush, and why so much of his stuff winds up in the sports editor's waste basket. This apprenticeship period will last two months, after which the synthetic Corum will be presented, gratis, to a metropolitan newspaper by the wildlife people. The wildlife people will continue to support this Ersatz Parker for two more months, while the paper makes up its mind whether to keep him or run him and his rabbit snares, beaver dams, two-prong flies and woodpecker shavings out of the joint.

Unless he upsets all calculations and learns how to fight, Buddy Baer is going to perpetuate an old prize-fight tradition which says that the brothers of boxing champions rarely amount to much as fighters. Jack Jeffries, brother of Jim, was palooka, and so was big Al Braddock, Jim's brother. Charley Loughran was a third-rater and so were Joe and Charley Leonard, brothers of the lightweight king. Philadelphia Jack O'Brien had a brother who called himself Young Jack O'Brien, but he couldn't carry his brother's bucket.

Maryland University's Relay Team Captures Distance Medley; Hoya Medley Bows

By Jack Munhall

A Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, Pa., April 26.—Showing surprising strength, the District of Columbia's representatives came very close to dominating the opening day program of the forty-sixth annual Penn Relay Carnival here today before 8,000 at Franklin Field, winning two individual titles, one team championship.

Al Blozis, Georgetown's Herculean sophomore, was the outstanding single performer of the day as he shattered the shot-put record with a throw of 55 feet 5⅜ inches and won the discus with an effort of 154 feet 6⅛ inches. Expected to establish a meet mark for the discus, Blozis was somewhat of a disappointment in that event but was easily the class of his field.

The third crown to fall to a Washington college was the Distance Medley Relay which the University of Maryland snatched with ease as the favored N. Y. U. team suffered a cruel break. Hal Bogrow, leadoff runner for the Violets dropped the baton at the first turn of the opening lap and N. Y. U. was never a factor thereafter.

However, this should in no way reflect on the Terrapins' victory, their first in this event and their second relay triumph in carnival

Schwarzkopf Wins Two-Mile Event; 2,500 Athletes Entered

By the Associated Press

Des Moines, Iowa, April 26.—Crack runners from Indiana University and Ralph Schwarzkopf, of Michigan, ran away with the first three major honors of the thirty-first Drake Relay Carnival today as the two-day competition opened with three record-breaking performances and another tied.

The carnival, drawing 2,500 athletes from 183 universities, colleges and high schools, attracted the largest field in eleven years and an attendance of 10,000. The event winds up tomorrow with fresh assaults on records.

Hoosiers Miss Record

The flying Hoosiers, paced by Roy Cochran, Big Ten quarter-mile champion and holder of world's indoor 440-yard mark of 0:48.2, captured both the university distance medley and sprint medley races, tying the Drake record in the sprint event.

A Hoosier quartet, composed of Cochran, Boyle, Jenkins and Kane, first raced to victory in the sprint

Bosox Defeat Yanks With Ease, 8 to 1

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 26.—Emerson Dickman of the Boston Red Sox kept the New York Yankees under almost perfect control today, beating them, 8-1, in the first meeting of the year between the two front runners of last year's American League pennant chase.

Dickman shut out the Bronx Bombers until the ninth inning when the world champions collected three of their seven hits for a run.

They added another in the third and two more in the fourth when they finally knocked Monte from the box. Spud Chandler and Lefty Lee

Yanks. HereToday, Unveil Star Rookie In Series Opener

Brooklyn Wins Sixth Straight; Sets Record

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 26.—The Brooklyn Dodgers set an all-time club record today in chalking up their sixth straight victory of the season—a 6-0 triumph over the Phillies.

Never had the Dodgers won that many without loss in opening any of their 50 seasons of big league baseball. It left them the only undefeated team in the major leagues.

The veteran Freddie Fitzsimmons prolonged the Brooklyn streak with a seven-hit performance that kept the Phillies far from home plate with anything that looked like a run.

A crowd of only about 1,500 saw the game. Gus Mancuso caught Fitzsimmons, marking the first time that the two former Giant battery mates had worked together in Dodger livery.

Armstrong Stops Junior

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 26.—Hammering Henry Armstrong defended the last of his three world championships, the welterweight title, by gaining a seven-round technical knockout over Paul Junior, courageous Lewiston, Me., veteran, before an estimated crowd of 18,000 tonight at the Boston Garden.

During the scheduled 15-rounder, Junior, whose battered face has stopped 1,000 fists during his long career, was dropped five times by the Negro titlist and was going down for the sixth time when Referee Johnny Martin waved Armstrong to his corner and then awarded him the victory by a technical knockout.

Armstrong, who appeared to have no fear of his canny opponent, opened the battle with a wild flourish, during which he battered Junior to teh canvas twice with rapid-fire hooks to the head. The bell came to Junior's rescue after he sank the second time and during the next three rounds the Negro coasted along easily as Junior made a desperate and successful attempt to get started.

fact that American League averages for two years had labeled him the best fielding first baseman in the league, Bonura was labeled a failure with the Giants last year by Manager Bill Terry. Even the fact that he led the Giants in hitting with a .321 batting average, and in runs batted in, did not cause Terry to tolerate Bonura's bunglesome fielding.

Long before the end of last season, Bonura was benched by Terry and this year the Giants' manager turned the first base job over to Rookie Babe Young, late of Nashville. In the Giants' games thus far, the more sprightly Young has convinced Terry that he can hit big league pitching.

Griff Hopes for Bat Punch

Griffith declared last night that he was willing to bear with Bonura's fielding weakness in the hope that the hefty Italian will add punch to the Nats' batting order. He pointed out that Bonura drove in more than 100 runs for the Nats in 1938.

Manager Bucky Harris welcomed the addition of Bonura. "We can use his power on our team," said Harris. "I don't know if he will play regularly, but he is a handy man to have around. He hasn't played a game this season, but if he reports in condition today, I may have him in the lineup against the Yankees."

Washington Takes Weird Game Here

Nats Stagger Into Victory as Mackmen Bobble All Over Griffith Stadium

By Shirley Povich

A Staff Correspondent

Thanks to the Philadelphia Athletics, who were generous to a fault yesterday, the Nats are now a fifth-place ball club. They moved into their new holdings on the impetus of a queer sort of 8-6 victory over the A's in the noisy presence of 6,000 women fans and 3,000 paying customers.

The Nats staggered into their triumphant finish. Their 8-3 lead all but vanished in the eighth inning when Al Hollingsworth was withdrawn from the box in panic by Bucky Harris. In the ninth, the A's had not only the tying but the winning runs on base before Rookie Sid Hudson extricated himself from his predicament.

The Athletics were alternately with the Nats and against 'em. Of the eight Washington runners who scored, only one reached base by making a hit. Four Philadelphia pitchers served up five walks, hit two batters and balked one run home. The A's also tossed two damaging errors into the proceedings.

Luckily for the Nats, they didn't pay off on basehits yesterday, because the Athletics outhit 'em, 10 to 6. But by the time the A's got around to making some important hits, the Nats had a prohibitive lead. There were few dull moments in those late innings, however, when it appeared that the Nats might toss away their third straight victory.

Hollingsworth, the discard from the Dodgers and Phillies, who was making his first start for the Nats, did a superlative job of it for five innings while the Nats were amassing a 4-0 lead with the assistance of the A's wild pitchers. Hollingsworth gave up only two hits to the A's while the game moved into the sixth.

Then the Athletics began to get obstreperous. A single by Pinch Hitter Earle Brucker, a pair of doubles by Sam Chapman and Bob Johnson, and a single to center by Siebert, cut a three-run chunk out of the Nats' lead. The Nats got those three runs back promptly with the help of some more horrible pitching by the A's, but then the Athletics counter-attacked.

Hollingsworth Is Out

Hollingsworth got Moses out in the eighth inning, but the next man out was Hollingsworth himself. Before he departed, he pitched a single to Bennie McCoy and walked Bob Johnson and Dick Siebert to fill the bases with one out. Hudson arrived at this point and his first act was to pitch a two-bagger to Frank Hayes which Lewis failed to reach after a long run. The third run of the inning scored on Rubeling's grounder to Travis and the Nats' lead was shaved to 8-6.

Hudson opened the ninth imposingly enough by striking out Pinch Hitter Dee Miles and then he started inviting trouble. Chapman doubled to left. Moses grounded to Wasdell, and young Hudson dropped Wasdell's throw at first-base to put the tying run on. McCoy moved the runners up a base by grounding into the box, and Hudson then walked Johnson to fill the bases.

Nelson Potter started the game for the A's and held the Nats to a run for four innings. That run developed after he hit Lead-Off Man George Case in the first inning.

Tiny Trick Is Beaten A Length

Sprinters Stage a Slam-Bang Battle; Jockey Oros Rides Victor, His Tenth

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 26.—Shipmate, a son of Mate and Scuttle, proved shipshape after a winter's rest and ran off with the Edgewater Purse here today. In the colors of A. C. Bostwick and in disgrace in the betting ring before the race, Shipmate drove to the wire a length in front of Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer's Tiny Trick and two lengths and a half in advance of the Christiana Stable's Briar Sharp, the choice.

Apprentice Jockey George Oros made Shipmate his tenth winner of the meeting and he made the long-shot followers of the gelding a $63.60 mutuel. Although his daddy won the Preakness, Shipmate was not named for the Pimlico classic or the Kentucky Derby but four horses in his wake were nominated for either or both of the big tests.

The race was a slam-bang sprint of 6 furlongs in which virtually every one of the 3-year-olds had some excuse. However, Shipmate was among those bothered and he had the speed and courage to recover and go on to victory.

Favorites Fail

Favorite players in the crowd of 7,500 were taking a beating all day. However, the weather was pleasant and the track was fast.

There was a merry scramble for the lead most of the way with at least four of the field getting to the front at some stage. Flaming High was on top at the half pole. Then followed a lot of shuffling, with Briar Sharp taking command nearing the stretch. At this point, Shipmate was squeezed back. Oros, however, brought the gelding to the outside and he rallied to outdrive Tiny Trick.

The program opened with a disappointing race by Longful, the horse that almost everyone believed was a "lock." The 7-year-old mare got in trouble and finished second to E. K. Bryson's Connie Plaut. The latter, making her season's debut, paid $15.50.

$188.40 Daily Double

There was a $188.40 pay-off in the daily double when Oros rode his first longshot of the day. He had the mount on John E. Hughes' Ring Up.

The son of Dr. Freeland escaped some of the trouble that developed soon after the break and went on to win over Sun Triad, a first-time starter, and Bright Arc. Ring Up rang up a $26.90 mutuel.

Hazel W., Watt Elliott's daughter of Mowlee, took the third race. True Knightess was the favorite and she took a lot of messing about. Shut off when attempting to make her move on the inside, Jockey P. Mills steered her wide and she overdid it, going almost to the outside fence. Hazel W. also swung out to lose the lead but she came again to defeat Billie Day and Busy Fingers in a blanket finish that saw True Knightess squeezed out of the money. Hazel W. paid $9.

Horses to Watch

OVERFLOWING — Closed with rush in last and will win with better luck.

GHOST FLYER—Off poorly and made up much ground in recent effort and is fit.

PLEASANT LADY—Won over maidens here and can do much better. Worth following.

SAXON PRINCESS—Shut off along rail in first outing. Should win soon.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONNIE PLAUT, $15.50, $5.60, $3.50; LONGFUL, $2.90, $2.30; PRETTY NIGHT, $2.90.

CONNIE PLAUT, slow to begin, improved position gradually on outside on backstretch, came around leaders to wear down PRETTY NIGHT and won going away. LONGFUL, rated while close up, was pinched back at far turn and came gamely at close. PRETTY NIGHT was sent to contention with bold move at far turn, took command, but could not stay with other two while under pressure. BURNER had speed to stretch and faltered SUN SWEEP closed willingly. ACTRESS was well placed early, got to front and then faded. BLUE CYCLONE set and forced early pace and weakened. BOO'S LETTER had keen early foot. PALKIN raced wide into first turn.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:03½. Winner, John E. Hughes' ch. c. (2), by Dr. Freeland—Margaret Scott. Trained by J. W. Boteler. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:55.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RING UP, $26.90, $11.40, $7.80; SUN TRIAD, $16.10, $9.00; BRIGHT ARC, $3.60.

RING UP, sent to front in opening furlong, drew clear and was kept to punishment in final eighth. SUN TRIAD raced greenly in early stages, came with rush between horses in stretch and bore right at end. BRIGHT ARC was in thick of contention from break and tired in final stages. LARGO MINT, probably beat, was off slowly, circled horses and closed full of run. I'M THE GUY raced forwardly to stretch and stopped.

Daily Double, CONNIE PLAUT and RING UP, Paid $188.40

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:35½. Off 3:36½. Winner, W. Elliott's lk. b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAZEL W, $9.00, $4.10, $2.80; BILLIE DAY, $4.40, $3.60; BUSY FINGERS, $4.00.

HAZEL W, in thick of contention from start, ran out at stretch turn, but recovered to withstand a long drive to win going away. BILLIE DAY was steadied along in early stages, came through on inside and took command inside eighth pole, but could not resist winner. BUSY FINGERS, slow to begin, came with a bold rush at close. TRUE KNIGHTESS, the best, was away slowly, was blocked badly while attempting to go through on inside, went very wide for racing room and closed with rush. TOY FOOT forced early pace and weakened. BLENETHEL had good early speed.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:05½. Off 4:06½. Winner, A. C. Bostwick's b. g. (3), by Mate—Scuttle. Trained by Elisabeth C. Bosley. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHIPMATE, $63.60, $24.10, $6.00; TINY TRICK, $8.40, $3.50; BRIAR SHARP, $2.70.

SHIPMATE, off in first flight and squeezed back at turn into stretch, rallied to take command and was driving out at end. TINY TRICK, always close up, assumed command in midstretch, but could not resist winner. BRIAR SHARP worked way to lead approaching stretch and weakened. GALLA QUEST was pulled up repeatedly while in close quarters going to turn, came wide for racing room when clear and hung through stretch. SKY DOG lost ground throughout. FLAMING HIGH had speed to set early pace and stopped. GALLANT DREAM could not keep up. SCREW DRIVER was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:35. Off 4:36. Winner, Mrs. F. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKETCHBOOK, $16.50, $6.80, $4.70; ROYAL BUSINESS, $5.00, $3.80; WHITE SAND, $3.80.

SKETCHBOOK, going in best form, went to front on backstretch, saved ground and was a handy winner. ROYAL BUSINESS, allowed to settle into stride, came around horses to improve position and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. WHITE SAND lacked early speed and came with rush at close. BOSTON PAL was hard ridden and had no excuses. BLAZING HEAT and BEWITCHED were used up racing together under hustling tactics.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:05. Off 5:05½. Winner, H. M. Babylon's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNOXVILLE, $5.80, $3.70, $3.10; MAHLETTE, $5.70, $3.90; ITALIAN HARRY, $4.80.

KNOXVILLE, steadied along within striking distance from start, forged to front on outside approaching stretch and was kept to hard drive to end. MAHLETTE, slow to begin, improved position on inside and closed gamely, but could not menace winner seriously. ITALIAN HARRY rallied mildly under pressure in stretch run. BRILLIANT ONE held safe. SCORIA made up some ground. SPEED SHIP set pace for half and stopped. WINGED VICTORY pressed early pace and tired. DUB was well placed for half. PASCUA showed nothing.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:36. Off 5:37. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TROUT STREAM, $17.20, $8.20, $4.80; PLAYMORE, $3.70, $2.70; PLAGETTA, $3.50.

TROUT STREAM, steadied along in early stages, came around horses to take command in midstretch and withstood closing bid of PLAYMORE while under pressure. PLAYMORE saved ground while moving in contention, but hung in closing 20 yards. PLAGETTA raced wide from beginning and weakened at end. PORTUNUS lacked speed for a half and closed some ground. BULLET B was sent to front nearing far turn, but tired after reaching stretch. BUBBLEWORTH set early pace and tired. NOBLE SCOT had early speed. CHARMING MARY was through after a quarter.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

If the timer and the chart caller at Keeneland turned in good jobs when Bimelech won the Blue Grass Stakes last Thursday, it looks as if the 1940 Derby is all over but putting the floral neckpiece on the Bradley ace. It takes only a comparison of the race run by Sirocco in the previous event that day with the effort of Bimelech and the writing seems to be on the wall. The fractional times of these horses for the quarter, half, three-quarters and mile, with Bimelech first, were :23 1-5 to :24 2-5, :46 3-5 to :48 2-5, 1:11 3-5 to 1:13, 1:37 2-5 to 1:39. Bimelech's time for the mile and an eighth was 1:51 to Sirocco's mark of 1:46 for a mile and a sixteenth. The chart comment said that Bimelech was never roused and won well in hand. On the other hand, Sirocco was termed ridden out. Of course, Sirocco is not a Bimelech, but he was a stake-winning 2-year-old last year. Just why Damaged Goods was not disqualified here last Thursday probably never will be known. After that going over that Hard Way absorbed anything should go around here. Just as a contrast, a green 2-year-old, racing in deep mud, was disqualified for swerving away from the whip and bumping a beaten horse. What's the story? Although Jockey Nick Wall had hoped to get back in action this week, he has announced that he will try to change his luck with a change of tracks and will await Pimlico's opening on Monday. Wall passed up possible winning mounts in both the $2,500 Aberdeen Stakes and the $10,000 added Philadelphia Handicap. The Eddie Decamillis family, residing in the town of Havre de Grace, is happy. Papa has been reinstated and will resume riding in New York. There are two children, one two weeks old. Art Brown is saving money, but unhappy, because he can't get to the races.

Confucius continued to call second horses when Royal Business placed and the B. R. shrunk to $22. For today, he say: $2 on Night Tide; all he needs is a ride.

—BILL.

First race — Steel Knight was favored when racing with platers of higher caliber in his last race. He figures much the best in this field. Red Jack disappointed in his last race, but in his previous start he ran second to Redfoot, finishing well in front of Apprehend. The latter would be a threat here if in top form.

Second race—Zayin has run several good races on the local circuit and appears well placed in this mediocre field of maidens. Quaker Brass indicated promise last year, but late efforts have been poor. Marching Sir was heavily backed by his supporters last start, but raced poorly.

Third race—Yankee Party has been competing against juveniles of this class in recent races. A recent winner, he met with ill luck in his last and figures to have a slight edge here. White Time beat the top horse last start, but was favored with clear sailing in the running. Scout Time for the show.

Fourth race—Slow Motion received conditioning for this race in the Harford Handicap, where he finished nine lengths behind Sun Egret. He is pitted against a cheaper field today. Night Tide showed a sparkling effort in a Class C handicap last outing and might prove the one to beat. Sack moves up, but has a money chance.

Fifth race—Whichcee set the pace in the Santa Anita Handicap only to bow to the mighty Seabiscuit in the final furlong. He figures much the best in this company. Masked General did not run his true race in the Harford Handicap and on best effort might be a threat in the late stages. Aethelwold is a factor worth consideration.

Sixth race—Bull Whip was beaten a half length by Dolly Val in the Tropical Park Handicap, run in good time. He should prove capable of turning back this field of mediocre handicap performers despite his high impost. Filesteo has been idle since last fall, but is reported ready for this race. Supreme Sir was good in Florida races.

Seventh race—Head Hunter was no match for Holton in his recent race, but the contenders in this heat appear to be very ordinary and the consistent old plater should account for first place. Company Halt showed little in his lone Bowie race but would be a stout contender on best effort. Schley Buck won his last, but didn't beat much.

Best bet—Whichcee.

Mickey Parks Signs 1940 Redskin Contract

Coach Ray Flaherty now has 14 of his veteran players back in the fold with the signing of Center Mickey Parks to his 1940 contract yesterday.

Parks, all Big-Six center in 1937, will be playing his third season with the Washington Redskins. A good defensive center, Parks is one of Flaherty's most dependable linemen.

Of the 14 men signed, 11 are linemen. Four ends, two tackles, three guards and two centers have already come to terms.

Parks during the off season is employed in the circulation department of the Washington Post.

Derby to Be Started From Open Gate

Col. Winn States Old Gate Is Safer At Present for Horses

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., April 26.—Col. Matt J. Winn, president of Churchill Downs, in a statement today, said the $75,000 added Kentucky Derby and all other stake races would be started from an open gate and not an electrically operated one.

Col. Winn said other races at the Downs would start out of the electric gate.

Col. Winn's statement said:

"I have given this important question every consideration because it affects not only the quality of the sport, but in some cases the safety of the horses entered in various stakes and purses. The electric gate has been used at Hot Springs, Keeneland and at other courses with a good measure of success, but it seems to me that until it is perfected and the safety of the horses absolutely assured, there must remain a doubt in the minds of horse owners if it would not be safer, for the present at least, to use the old Bahr starting gate.

"After a thorough investigation I find that a majority of the horsemen prefer the use of the old gate rather than take any chances. In fairness to those owners who will race at Churchill Downs this spring, I have come to this decision.

"The $75,000 added Kentucky Derby, which will be run Saturday, May 4, and all the other stake races to be run at this meeting, will be started from the old Bahr or open gate, with which the horses and the public are familiar. All other races during the meeting will be started out of the Bahr electric or closed gate, which I am assured has already been greatly improved."

Anacostia Bows to Tech, 3-2; Wilson Beats Roosevelt, 11-10

Faircloth's Fine Mound Work Fails

Hurls Four-Hit Ball Only to Lose as Foes Score Run in Tenth For 2d Victory

A brilliant 4-hit pitching performance by Anacostia High's Art Faircloth went for nothing yesterday as Tech, pushing across a run in the tenth inning, scored its second interhigh triumph of the season, 3-2, at Anacostia Field.

On the mound for the Trainers as they overcame a 2-0 Indian lead in the late innings and went ahead to score the crucial run was Buddy Webb, the burly right-hander who has hurled each of the team's three games. He was touched for 8 hits, but managed to strike out 13 Anacostia batsmen against Faircloth's 10.

It was one of the few clean hits of the game, a single by Outfielder Joe Bryan to deep right, which sent Kelly Lewis across the plate in the tenth. But it was a wild throw by Anacostia's Catcher Gene Crawford which allowed the score to be tied. Trying to catch Lewis stealing third in the eighth, the novice backstop sent one sailing over Lambert Anderson's head.

No extra base hits marked the airtight game, but Shortstop Martin Green stole the batting show for the winners with two of the team's four hits. The first came in the seventh with no one on, but after stealing second the shifty little infielder came home on Chester Ciomei's single for Tech's first score of the day.

Joe Soresi and Crawford led the stickwork of the losers with a pair of bingles apiece. Soresi scored on his first safety when Catcher Charley Wilson threw wild to first.

Old Dominion Holds Dog Show Today

Five years ago the Old Dominion Kennel Club gave its first show in an abandoned factory in Alexandria. Today, the Old Dominion Club gives its fifth annual show at the baseball park in Alexandria. The 718 dogs from all over the United States, Canada and—through new American owners—from Europe are to parade before the judges at this outdoor, all-breed, one-day event.

The judging will start promptly at 10 o'clock. Because of the capacity of the grounds, it will be possible to have large rings and plenty of them, so that judging can be done at a rapid pace. There will be something doing all the time, and the most interesting classes and events as planned for the afternoon. The obedience tests will draw a big following, and here, as in breed classes, Washington owners will carry their share of the entries and win their share of ribbons and prizes.

Children's dog classes will also be held in the afternoon and every child entering a dog will get a box of candy, while the winning dog in each group will net a more substantial reward.

There will be a parade of champions, with the famous dogs of the country marching solemnly down the field, each wearing a rosette with his name.

The judging of the groups—non-sporting, toys, hounds, etc., will also take place in the afternoon, while the final climax of the show, the award of best of show, will be reached before daylight fails.

Among the dogs which will be benched at Alexandria are a number of the so-called "refugee dogs," that were sent from England or the Continent to save their lives when war broke out. Thus those who attend the Old Dominion Show will have an opportunity to see specimens of the breed which have been acclaimed in Europe, as well as the great American examples.

Philadelphia Spaniel Wins at Riverside

Mrs. Henry Ross' Cocker Adjudged Best Of Show; Adds to Her Long List of Victories in Brief Career

By Anne Hagner

Mrs. Henry A. Ross' black Cocker Spaniel, Ch Nonquitt Notable's Pride, won the award for the best dog in the show at the National Kennel Club's annual dog show in Riverside Stadium here last night.

Notable's Pride, an 18-month-old representative of Mrs. Ross' well known kennels in Philadelphia, was handled by the veteran, Tom Godfrey, for whom the well?mannered little dog won sufficient points for her championship in the first six shows of her career. Chief among her other victories came last season on the $1,000 class at Boston, where she placed second to Ch My Own Brucie, later champion at Madison Square Garden. She also scored heavily at New York and Newark.

Notable's Pride took the title after winning the best cocker spaniel ribbon and the topping of the sporting breeds' division.

Outstanding Terrier

Among the terriers, the award went to Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Statler's Scotch terrier, Barberry Knows Larkspur, of New Jersey.

The nonsporting championship was taken by Ch Blanken Cyrano, a poodle owned by the Lowmont Kennels, of Greenwich, Conn., who scored over Dell Waters' Rockefeller Progress Junior, a Boston terrier from Decatur, Ga.

A Pekingese, Arellian Choo Leen of Catawba, took the blue ribbon in the toy division for Mrs. James N. Austin, of Old Westbury, Long Island.

C. H. Rickel's distinguished looking Afghan Hound, Tanya Sahib of Cy Ann, won over a good field in the Hound Division, defeating Mardormere Kennel's Whippett, Flornell Glamorous, from Glenhead, Long Island.

The working breed was dominated by Giralda Farm's Thora V Bern of Giralda, a beautifully built German Shepherd from Madison, N. J.

Stadium Crowded

A topflight crowd of dog-lovers crowded the stadium to watch Col. W. Brydon Tennant, of Richmond, Va., make the final decision when the winners of the various divisions met to chose the best dog in the show. The champion's handler received the ribbon and trophy from Corrine Griffith, former movie star and now wife of George Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins.

SKYE TERRIER

The Skye has been known in northern Scotland as far back as can be traced. He was used to hunt small game in the rough country and it is said that wherever there are rocks, dens, burrows, cairns or covers to explore the Skye should be called. A scrappy individual, not looking for trouble but not dodging it either, and possessing a sunny fun-loving disposition, his popularity in this country is rapidly increasing.

Nats Defeat Mackmen; Buy Bonura

Former Washington First Sacker Will Play Here Today

Singles by Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis moved Case home.

In the fourth, with one out, Early drew a walk and Hollingsworth surprised all and sundry by bashing a single to right. Potter filled the bases by walking Case and Lewis, then pounded a single past Lillard to move two runners home. Case reached third on the blow, but Lewis was out at second. Case provoked Potter into making a balk with his feints toward home, and Umpire John Quinn waved the third run of the inning across the plate.

Jimmy Wasdell was an unwitting hero of the Nats four run uprising in the seventh against Lester McCrabb, Philadelphia rookie, late of Williamsport. The Nats contributed only one hit to their four-run inning. McCrabb walked Early and then hit Hudson on the leg. When Case bunted, Third Baseman Rubeling contributed to the panic by dropping McCrabb's throw. And when McCrabb walked Lewis to force over the first run of the inning, Connie Mack pulled him off the mound.

In came Bill Beckman to pitch to Wasdell, who promptly grounded to the pitcher. Beckman threw to the plate to cut off a run, but when Catcher Frank Hayes rifled the ball to first for a double play attempt, his throw conked Wasdell on the head and two runs scored before the ball was recovered. Gee Walker produced a single for the Nats' eighth run of their highly delightful afternoon.

Blair Homer Beats Purple

Outfielder Clark's four-run homer in the fourth inning proved Montgomery Blair's margin of victory yesterday as it staved off a late Gonzaga rally to win, 7-4, on the Four Corners diamond.

The big blow broke a 2-2 deadlock and started a five-run spree. Gonzaga came back with single runs in the sixth and eighth but were never a serious threat until the ninth when it loaded the bases with one out Joe Thompson went in at that point to relieve Southgate, forced the first man to pop up weakly and fanned the final Purple batsman.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Again this season, The Washington Post and Station WJSV conduct The Man of the Month contest to determine the Nats' most valuable players for each month. Following each game, Arch McDonald will distribute points to the Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Post will reward each winner of the Man of the Month contest with a $50 merchandise order.

Buddy Lewis was the outstanding performer for the Nats yesterday in their victory over the Athletics and thus he moves into a contending position for Man of the Month honors. Points were distributed as follows:

To Lewis, five points, because he singled with the bases full in the fourth to drive over two runs and because he figured in a total of four Washington runs.

To Gerald Walker, two points, because he made two of the Nats' six hits and drove home a run.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because he batted in the Nats' first run with his first-inning single.

To Al Hollingsworth, two points, because he pitched two-hit ball in the first five innings while the Nats were compiling their lead. The totals:

Buddy Lewis	13	Walter Masterson	6
Jimmy Bloodworth	12	Jake Early	5
Cecil Travis	11	Rick Ferrell	2
Gerry Walker	10	Bucky Jacobs	2
George Case	9	Jimmy Wasdell	2

Bowman's Homer Helps To Beat Cards

Eighth Inning Clout With Two on Aids Pirates' 10-4 Victory

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 26.—Joe Bowman, jr., just returned from burying his father in Kansas City, clouted a ball 400 feet into the right-field stands today for a home run with two mates on base to pull Pittsburgh from behind and propel the fighting Bucs on to a 10-4 triumph over St. Louis.

Joe had two strikes and no balls against him when he delivered the wallop in the eighth inning off his namesake Bob Bowman. Fans recalled that after his aged father died and before he left for the funeral last week the former Philly hurler had pitched Pittsburgh to a victory over Chicago.

D. C. Recreation Baseball School Opens This Morning

The only requirement for aspiring youngsters wishing to join the second annual baseball school of the District of Columbia Recreation Department, starting this morning at 9:30 and lasting for three hours, is that they bring their own gloves and spikes and report promptly.

With Pete English again in charge, the enrollment is expected to exceed by more than 50 the 140 youths who showed up for last year's classes. The school will be in session for five consecutive Saturdays with an intra-school baseball game capping instruction. "Doc" White, former Chicago White Sox hurler, will have charge of ambitious pitchers, along with Mac McCarthy and Pershing Mondorff; catchers will be handled by John Boyda, infielders by Everett Cross, and outfielders by Tommy Nolan, Fred Maisel and Burt Culver.

Cavalier Gridmen Defeat Catholic U.

Several Men Stand Out as Two Teams Engage In Two-Hour Scrimmage at Charlottesville; Both Offenses Click

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., April 26.—Five weeks of spring football practice at the University of Virginia came to a close today, when a two-hour scrimmage was held with the squad from Catholic University.

When hostilities had ceased, it was found that the Cavaliers had registered three touchdowns as against two for the Cardinals.

Coaching staffs were on the field and directed the plays throughout the contest, played part of the time in a drizzling rain and witnessed by about 300 undergraduates.

Honors were even in the first half, with each eleven scoring two touchdowns. At half time the Cardinals were in front by a 1-point margin. The final touchdown by the Cavaliers came in the third quarter. Neither team threatened in the final period.

Griffin, Ambrosia Score

Griffin and Ambrosia registered the touchdowns for Catholic and the extra point was contributed by Schroeder, a guard. Dudley, Craig, and Stevens made the touchdowns for Virginia, and Schiesinger made good one of his placement kicks.

Coach Murray's opening lineup consisted mainly of letter men, but before the contest was concluded some 50 players had seen action. Bill Dudley, Cavalier sophomore sensation of last year, stood out in the opening drive, covering nearly the length of the field.

Later he gave way to Boston Stevens, of Falmouth, Mass., a slender freshman back, who showed much promise by sparking another march late in the second quarter. Another freshman back who starred was Edward Robeson, son of the personnel manager of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co.

Both sides showed plenty of offensive fireworks.

Giants Take Fourth in Row, Beating Bees

By the Associated Press

New York, April 26.—The Giants came from behind today to win their fourth straight victory, this one by 5-3, and plaster the Boston Bees with their fifth straight setback of the season.

The Giants turned the trick in the fourth inning, with pinch hits by Alban Glossop and Joe Moore playing the biggest roles in the rally. Moore, batting for Frank Demaree doubled to send in the two winning tallies.

A shivering ladies' day crowd of 8,090 saw the game.

Steels Surprise With Weakness, Leading Stocks Downward in Irregular Declines; Paper Issues Hold Strength on War News

New York, April 26.—Irregularly declining prices characterized trading on the Stock Exchange today, the list losing an average of 0.29 point. The surprise of the day was the action of the steels, which led the market downward, despite indications of a higher operating rate in numerous other groups gave a fairly good account of themselves.

United States Steel, Bethlehem, National, Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube gave up more than a point each. The group opened and remained lower throughout.

Paper stocks did better than the balance of the list, due to the assumption of higher prices for their domestic product. While the progress of the war in Norway is exerting a depressing influence on securities, it is not doing so in the pulp and paper division.

Business news was mixed and without definite bullish news. The tendency of investors was to place major importance on foreign developments. There was some bearishness on the fact that Joachim von Ribbentrop will make a statement tomorrow and reports of German successes in Norway were credited with a large part of the selling, set off by selling orders in American securities on the Amsterdam exchange.

Motors moved lower today, Chrysler losing 1¾. Other losses of leaders ranging around 1 to 2 points included American Smelting, Great Northern preferred, Union Carbide and International Harvester.

Bond Trading Routine

Listed bond trading was routine today, and hardly any price variations of importance were discernible. Trading in the listed market amounted to $6,030,000.

Japanese issues were firm in the foreign section. Norwegian and Danish bonds were idle. Belgians improved. Speculative railroad bonds were heavy, but recessions were fractional.

Security Issues Top Last Week

By the Associated Press

New York, April 26.—Public offerings of new securities during the week ended yesterday totaled $56,953,288, which was $5,859,201 above the previous week, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

More than 60 per cent of the total represented a demand for new money.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, April 26 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agricul.).—The wool market in Boston was rather quiet today. The demand for woolen wools and for wool tops was slower than last week. An occasional buyer was placing orders for fine territory wools for future delivery at around 82 cents, scoured basis, and for good French combing length wool in original bags, delivered to mills. Demand, however, was narrow and only very moderate quantities were being sold.

Wheat Slumps 2 Cents to Low On Rain Report

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 26.—Behaving in what some traders say was typical war market fashion, wheat prices today slumped 2 cents a bushel to the lowest levels since April 13, showing a reaction of about five cents from the recent three-year highs.

Selling was largely based on receipt of goods to heavy rains in the domestic Southwest, together with prospects of more moisture in some hard wheat localities and elsewhere in the United State grain belt.

Wheat closed 1⅝ to 2¼ cents lower than yesterday, at the lowest point of the session, with May, 1.07⅝ to 1.07½, and July, 1.06¾ to 1.06¼. Corn was ¼ to ¾ off, May, 63⅞ to 63¾; July, 64¾ to 64¼. Oats, ½ to 1⅛ down. Rye, 2 to 2¼ off. Lard, 5 lower.

Gas Company's Net Income Gains in March

Washington Utility Reports $144,992 Revenue Increase

The March report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday shows operating revenues of $966,808 this year, compared with $821,816 for March last year, an increase of $144,992.

Operating expenses, including taxes, were $686,514 in March this year, an increase of $103,305 over March, 1939.

Income deductions were $76,286, an increase of $2,647 over March a year ago. The net result of March's operations was a net income of $223,688 this year, compared with $178,436 in 1939.

The company's net income for the first three months of 1940 amounted to $789,141, a gain of $145,423 over the first quarter in 1939.

The report also shows gas sales of 1,483,820 M cubic feet in March this year, an increase of 268,027 M cubic feet, or 22 per cent over March last year, chiefly the result of the coldest weather this year.

There were 159,292 meters in service on March 31, this year, an increase of 4,359 over the same date last year. The company expended approximately $77,000 in March and $239,500 in the first three months of 1940 for extensions to its properties.

Auto Production Decrease in Week Forecast by Ward's

Detroit, April 26 (AP).—Ward's automotive reports estimated today that the motorcar industry's assembly plants would produce 101,405 cars and trucks this week. Assemblies last week numbered 103,725.

The trend of consumer demand for new and used motorcars still is upward. Each of the several General Motors divisions, first to complete tabulations for the second 10-day period of April, reported gratifying increases over the preceding 10 days as well as gains ranging to more than 50 per cent over the corresponding period of a year ago.

The trade generally regards the 10-day sales reports issued since the first of the year as bearing out earlier expectations of more profitable operations during 1940 than the industry's avarage for the last decade.

Cotton Textile Mills Active

Cotton textile manufacturers paid somewhat more for their raw cotton in 1939 than in 1938, but this was partly offset by a reduction in the cost of labor. Consequently, the prices of cotton goods last year were only slightly higher than in 1938, when they were at the lowest level in the past decade with the exception of 1932, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The consumption of raw cotton by the mills rose from 5,902,000 bales in 1938 to 7,367,000 bales in 1939.

Power Output Gains

The Utility Management Corporation reports that for the week ended April 12, net electric output of the Associated Gas & Electric group was 94,684,003 units (k.w.h.). This is an increase of 12,716,783 or 15.5 per cent above production of 81,967,220 units a year ago.

Realty Value Here Exceeds Md., Virginia

Home Loan Bank Board Mortgage Totals Show Comparative Worth

The high value of realty holdings in the District of Columbia, as contrasted to homes in Maryland and Virginia, were graphically portrayed yesterday by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in announcing mortgage finance operations for the first quarter of the year.

While nearly twice as many mortgages were executed in Virginia and Maryland than in the District, the value of the capital's mortgages exceeded Maryland's and almost equalled the total in Virginia.

The figures: District of Columbia, 2,953 mortgages totaling $12,896,000; Virginia, 5,990 mortgages amounting to $13,871,000; Maryland, $11,923,000 in 4,673 mortgages.

Mortgage totals in the District this year compared with the following 1939 first quarter figures: 2,929 and $12,962,000; Maryland, 4,589 and $13,456,000. Comparable data were not given for Virginia.

Distribution by types of lending institutions was set forth as follows:

District—
Savings, loan associations	1,201	$5,788,000
Insurance companies	118	786,000
Banks and trust companies	236	1,380,000

Montgomery-Ward Elects Avery

Chicago, April 26 (AP).—Sewell L. Avery, chairman of the board of Montgomery Ward & Co., was elected president today. The action of the board of directors formally authorized Avery to resume the duties he relinquished in 1938.

The directors declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock payable July 15 to stockholders of record June 14, and a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on Class A stock payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 14.

Avery told the stockholders that the company would earn about $5,000,000 in the three months ending April 30 this year.

Folger Resigns as Head Of Montgomery-Ward

Chicago, April 25 (AP).—Resignation of Raymond H. Folger, president and director of Montgomery Ward & Co., was announced today by Chairman Sewell Avery.

The brief announcement gave no season for Folger's withdrawal or indication of who might succeed him. Stockholders and directors meet tomorrow.

Mrs. Pray Wins Keefer Cup Play

Mrs. Harris Is Defeated In Play-Off

Victor Is Winner by Three Strokes to Carry Trophy Back To Manor Club

Mrs. L. G. Pray took the Keefer Cup back to Manor yesterday, winning the 18-hole playoff over Mrs. Elbert Harris, of Beaver Dam, by a three-stroke margin over the Chevy Chase course.

Mrs. Pray, the Manor Club champion, thus succeeds a clubmate, Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, as winner of the 36-hole medal play event. The new Keefer champion shot a 91 yesterday, minus a 6 handicap, for a net 85, while Mrs. Harris, the Beaver Dam champion, was 98, minus 19, for 88.

Mrs. Pray had consistent rounds of 91-88 and 91 for three days, with a 6 handicap deducted from each score, while Mrs. Harris was 97-90-98, minus 10 each time. They tied with 167 nets in the regulation play.

Picks Up Handicap

Mrs. Pray, who was forced to concede four handicap strokes, picked them up by the fifth hole and took a two-stroke lead at the ninth, out in 46 to a 52 for her opponent. Mrs. Harris had sevens on 5-6 and 8 as she ran into trouble, playing only her fourth round of the season.

The Beaver Dam representative started back 3-5-5-3, however, to pick up four strokes and take a lead, but she hit another bad streak and lost strokes on every hole in to the eighteenth.

It was the third time that Mrs. Harris was runner-up in the event, finishing second twice while playing as Ellen Kincaid.

Although it was Mrs. Pray's first victory in nine years' participation in the tournament, she has won a prize every year. Mrs. Pray was tied for first last year until Mrs. Pugh, one of the last to finish, posted the winning score.

KENWOOD

Mrs. H. H. Hughes won the 4's class as Kenwood women golfers competed in a 4-5-6-7 tournament. Mrs. I. E. Peterson won with the most 5's, while Mrs. F. J. Holland and Mrs. M. A. Miller tied in the six class. Mrs. L. Sasscer had the most sevens.

CONGRESSIONAL

Mrs. K. Welte, Mrs. A. B. Jenks and Mrs. F. G. Awalt were A class winners as Congressional women golfers opened the club season with a handicap event. Winners in Class B, included Mrs. C. E. Slawson, Mrs. H. J. Klossner, Mrs. P. J. Winkler, Mrs. M. Johnston and Mrs. Fred Bradley, while the Class C winners were Mrs. J. C. Orr and Mrs. R. E. Burks.

ARMY AND NAVY

Army and Navy women golfers played host to representatives from Quantico, Annapolis, Army War College and Fort Belvoir at the Service Club. The three guest prizes went to Quantico players, Mrs. Raymond Stollin, Miss A. Fricker and Mrs. P. J. Kelly. Army and Navy prize winners included Mrs. George Lynch, Mrs. M. K. Barroll and Mrs. P. J. Kelly.

Wilson High And Western Golf Winners

Wilson and Western golf teams continued to set the pace in the interhigh section of the Schoolboy League yesterday, the former defeating Anacostia, 9 to 0, at Woodmont, and Western swamping Tech, 8 to 1, at Congressional, losing only a forfeited match.

Earle Skinker's 71 led the Wilson team to victory, as five of the matches were won by 8 and 7 margins. George Vass defeated Dick Burgess, 1 up, in the No. 1 match of the Western-Tech meeting, while in the same foursome Sparks, of the winners, defeated Goodsteed, Tech, 10 and 8, winning every hole.

At Manor

Beuchert (G) defeated Stanton, 1 up; Johnson (St.J) defeated Cullen, 1 up. Best ball—Gonzaga, 1 up.

Fitzgerald won by default; Rita (G) defeated Steele, 7 and 6. Best ball—Gonzaga, 8 and 7.

Dillon (G) defeated Davis, 6 and 5; Kessenech (G) defeated Malone, 2 and 1. Best ball—Gonzaga, 4 and 2.

Blozis Breaks Shot-Put Mark At Penn Relay Carnival

history, for Swede Eppley's boys ran a smart race. They were timed in 10 minutes 12.5 seconds, with Alan Miller, Jim Kehoe, Tommy Fields and Mason Chronister carrying the baton. Maryland led all the way and Chronister led Ohio State's anchor runner to the tape by fully 25 yards.

Miller was clocked at 50 seconds flat for the quarter mile leg and Chronister negotiated the final or mile lap in 4:24.2, an effort far below his average.

With this victory safely tucked away, Maryland withdrew from the College Sprint Medley in order to conserve the strength of its small squad for tomorrow's tests in the 2-mile and 4-mile relays.

Hoyas Run Second

Additional honors escaped the District when Georgetown finished a heart-breakingly close second to Princeton in its heat of the college sprint medley relay which the Tigers won on fastest time with the Hoyas next.

A contender from the outset when Morty Alnwick, running a surprisingly strong quarter, brought the baton to George Bogan in second place, Georgetown fought it out with Princeton in the home stretch only to lose by a margin of less than 2 yards after it appeared that its anchor runner was fouled.

Sophomore Ken Lyden, after lying in fourth place the first lap of the final two-lap leg, challenged the Tigers' great Edward Burrowes, jr., but just as it seemed as though he would pass his rival and win the race Lyden was bumped off stride by the Tiger, and, as it developed, out of first place. The officials ignored the foul.

New York University, continuing to belie its premeet status of heavy favorite in the relays, didn't even place, although Jimmy Herbert ran a remarkable opening leg. Pocketed at the start, Herbert was absolutely last as the field took the first turn, but he courageously went wide to the outside and by dint of some superhuman running assumed a 2-yard lead just before the batons were passed for the next leg.

The 240-pound Blozis, who holds the world's indoor record for the 16-pound shot at 55 feet 8¾ inches, set the new mark on his second try. His worst throw, 51 feet 5½ inches, was a full 2 inches farther than the best mustered by Penn's defending champion and erstwhile record holder, Charlie Beetam. Navy's Ed Hahnfeld, a Washington boy, was third and John Eazyk, of Pitt, fourth.

In the discus Blozis mustered Hahnfeld again and also J. G. Smith, of Florida, and Phillip Looby, of LaSalle, who trailed in that order. Hahnfeld's best chuck was for 150 feet 5¾ inches. All throws were far below what had been expected. Pitt was off to an auspicious start in an attempt to duplicate last year's record breaking feat of winning four major titles when its one quarter relay team of Frank Ohl, Bill Carter, Larry Tregoning and Harold Stickel flashed home an upset victor. Surprise of the race, which was run in two sections and decided on fastest times, was the failure of N. Y. U to even qualify for the finals.

Corbett Fourth

Johnny Corbett, of Catholic University, ran the best race of his career in placing fourth in a star-studded field of 31 in the special 2-mile race, included on the carnival program for the first time since 1927. The slender Cardinal had second place in his grasp until the homestretch when he weakened and was passed by two rivals in the last 15 yards. The race was won in upset by Michigan's Roy Fehr as Al Boulanger, Pitt's intercollegiate champion, was never a factor. Gilbert Dodds, of Ashland, was second, and Daniel Kemple, of Bloomsburg Teachers, third.

Washington College will be after four varsity and one freshman team title today as the carnival, which has attracted 3,000 entries, comes to a close.

Georgetown and Maryland are entered in the 1-mile relay feature of the entire meet, while the Terrapins also will go to the post for the 2- and 4-mile races. Catholic University and American University are entered in the Mason-Dixon Conference 1-mile championship, and the Hoya's freshman team also will compete in a mile relay.

As expected, Fuller retained his invitation 120-yard high hurdles championship with ease, winning the first heat in 14:6 and the finals in a disappointing 14:8. Second was George A. Knoerl, of Cornell, who won the second heat in 15:03. Joe Newman, of Pittsburgh, placed third and Thomas C. Garland, Michigan's junior National A. A. U. titleholder, was fourth. Garland finished second to Fuller in the opening heat.

Perhaps the outstanding performance among the scholastic runners was a 49:03 quarter by Dixie Dunbar, 19-year-old No. 3 runner of West Catholic in the Catholic high school one mile relay championship. This was one of the fastest 440's posted all afternoon in either the scholastic or collegiate divisions. A senior, Dunbar is reported headed for Villanova. West Catholic won the race in 3:31:9.

The honor of capturing the first American relays title fell to Seton Hall's speedy quartet which won the prep school one-quarter mile championship in 43:2 with a team of R. McCrillis, M. Vincent, J. O'Hearn and P. Plummer.

The high school quarter-mile team race was taken by Brooklyn (N. Y.) Manuel in 44 seconds flat. The winning team included J. Baclavas, R. Combaluzier, D. Nelson, W. Old.

Post League Opens Season This Afternoon

With all the ceremony of an opening big league series, The Washington Post Industrial League launches its season today on the East Ellipse, Heurich Brewers, the 1939 champs, meeting the runner-up Russell Motors nine at 3 p. m.

Former Judge Edward M. Curran, now district attorney and commissioner of the National Amateur Baseball Federation, will hurl the first ball. Other Government officials, as well as sponsors of the five teams in the powerful league, will be on hand for the first clash of the year.

Winner of last year's title after a play-off with the Motormen, the Brewers will probably be a slight choice in today's game. With the exception of the addition of Mack Posnack, at first base, the team is almost the same as that which won the city title last season and reached the finals of the national tournament here.

Cameo Nine Loses to FBI

In an inter-league sandlot baseball game yesterday, Cameo Furniture nine, of The Washington Post Industrial League, lost a 5-3 decision to FBI on the Ellipse.

The Furniture men tied the count in the third at 1-1, but two G-men runs in the last half of the inning put the winners out in front for good. They tallied twice more in the fifth to void Cameo's two-run rally in the final stanza.

Indiana Tops Drake Relays

medley and barely missed smashing the record. Campbell Kane, Big Ten indoor mile champion, running as anchor, stumbled to his hands when he took the baton, but with a burst of speed overhauled Dye Hogan, of Michigan, to bring to Indiana in 3:25, to equal the meet record set a year ago by Rice Institute.

Indiana again relied on Cochran for victory in the distance medley in which the Hoosiers held the indoor record of 10:10.3, established in the Butler relays this spring. Cochran got away to a flying start in the first quarter, with Hoke, Hedges and Tolliver carrying on to conquer Oklahoma A. & M. in 10:12.6.

Schwarzkopf, "Big Ten" 2-mile title holder, was the first of the individual stars to triumph when he easily won the 2-mile championship in the slow time of 9:22. He had no trouble in disposing of a field of 13, beating William Jenkins, of Iowa State Teachers College, to the tape by more than 40 yards, with John Munski, University of Missouri, finishing 30 yards behind Jenkins.

Hoyas Blank G.W.U., 5 to 0; Wixted Hurls

Pitcher Also Collects Two Hits; Bright Starts for Colonials

Its second straight shutout over a local opponent was registered by Georgetown's slugging nine yesterday as it pounded George Washington pitching for nine hits and a 5-0 victory on the Medical School diamond.

Four victories in five games the Hoyas now claim, their latest a 20-0 shellacking of American U. Responsible for yesterday's triumph was heady pitching by Bill Wixted, backed up by three double plays by the Hoya infield.

Wixted's brilliance was not confined to hurling, however, the husky star accounting for two runs in the first inning on the first of his two hits. He shared batting honors with First Baseman Joe Mahoney.

Toby Bright, former Western High star, started on the mound for the Colonials, but after four hits had been amassed off his offerings in the first two frames he was relieved by big Frank McGinnis. The latter held the Hoyas fairly safe the remainder of the game with five well distributed safeties.

This evening at 11 o'clock the Secretary of Labor, a bevy of important local labor officials and the headmen at WJSV will join in a tribute to Albert N. Dennis, the conductor of the "Labor News Review."

It will be the 300th consecutive Labor News Review broadcast over WJSV and with one exception Dennis has been at the mike for all of them. His job is an unbelievably ticklish one, for once a week he gives the latest news on the labor situation and as you must know the feeling runs high and blood boils rather easily among laborites. Yet, Dennis has been able to discuss labor's problems, possibilities, and peculiarities every week without arousing the ire of one side or another and still give a good enough broadcast to keep the listener interest high.

Organized labor here in Washington is presenting WJSV with a cup as a gesture of appreciation to the station for it's interest in labor. To Dennis will go another cup, for similar reasons.

Don't forget the entire radio schedules change tomorrow with the general arrival in the East of daylight saving time and the necessity for the Columbia network using that new-fangled invention. Most of your favorite shows will be heard an hour earlier, but some have been shifted drastically.

Among the major changes is Arch L. McDonald, the sports fellow. Archibald will do his stuff every evening except Friday at 9:45 p. m. starting tomorrow. It should make for a better sports review because he'll have the scores of games out West which are sometimes too late for an earlier show. Arch will keep his listeners up to last minute sports events during his play-by-play broadcasts.

These Women!

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

The drama of Shamrock O'Toole's life was moving swiftly on. Karl Hetrick, whom she had expected to marry, had married Dagne Olsen instead. Clancy O'Toole tried to comfort his child and suggested that she take up dancing as a career, so she found a job in the chorus of a new musical show. There she met Tex Stacy, cowboy singer, whom she liked well enough to take home to dinner with Clancy. After the show opened, Tex and Smoky were married, only to have grief engulf Smoky when Clancy died. He gave his life to save Dagne's when the Hetrick house caught fire and she was unconscious upstairs. After the funeral, Karl begged Smoky to visit Dagne in the hospital, and Dagne told Smoky she expected to die, was sorry for the trouble she had caused, and hoped Smoky and Karl would marry. Karl met Smoky outside and tried to ask her forgiveness, but Smoky only told him sternly to try to make Dagne want to live and to make her happy. Smoky went home where Tex greeted her sympathetically and tried to comfort his saddened wife.

Chapter 19

SHAMROCK was touched deeply with the friendship offered by every one at the theater when she and Tex returned the next night. To them she was only an amateur, but sorrow had come to her and they wanted to make her feel that she belonged.

Torchy put her arms around Smoky and kissed her when she entered the dressing room. "Oh, Smoky," she sobbed, "it's awful losing your father just when you got married and ought to be so happy. It nearly killed me when I read about it in the papers."

Smoky sat down at her mirror. "It's the way Pop wanted to go," her voice caught. "He wanted to die with his boots on. And he never would have been well because of his heart and his injured back. He suffered terribly."

"Then it's best," Torchy wiped her eyes. "I think you're very brave to came back so soon."

"I'm going in Tex's 'Go West' number," Smoky pushed back her hair and tied a cloth around her head as she had seen the other girls do before making up.

"No foolin'," Torchy said unbelievingly. "In Le Maire's spot?"

Smoky nodded. Torchy giggled. "Oh, boy! Will that burn Gogo? She'll never forgive you. Maybe you don't know it, but she's got a crush on your cowhand."

Smoky smeared cold cream on her face languidly. "I guess Tex can handle her. I'm not worried."

"I wouldn't want her in my hair," Torchy shrugged.

Smoky had been told to watch Gogo and Tex from the wings, so that she would see how the star played the part of Lona from Arizona.

Tex wore a dark make-up that made him look very Spanish and Gogo was adorable in a white riding habit and Western hat. Underneath a yellow moon, Tex strummed his banjo and sang to her in his deep, mellow baritone:

Give me your love and I will hold
You in my heart forever.

Smoky watched and listened carefully because of what Torchy had told her, and she could see that Gogo certainly had her heart in her work. At the end Tex took her in his arms and kissed her, and Smoky saw Le Maire close her eyes and cling to Tex as the curtain fell to deafening applause.

Smoky Was Jealous

They took three encores, and at the end of each Gogo clung to Tex and kissed him. Gogo went off into the other wings to go to her dressing room and Tex joined Shamrock. She pulled away when he bent to kiss her.

"Wipe some of that woman's lipstick off before you kiss me," Smoky said furiously, and Tex looked at her in amazement.

"Darling! Don't tell me you're jealous of Gogo. You flatter me."

"I'm not blind," Smoky told him grimly. "You certainly enjoy your work."

It infuriated her when Tex grinned: "Bless my old buttons! The little woman has been spying on me."

"I guess," Smoky twisted her hands, "everybody in the show knows that she's got a crush on you. I—it's just embarrassing, that's all."

"Never mind, honey. You'll be getting Le Maire's kisses after tomorrow night. And we'll show 'em a real fadeout."

Gogo was in the room waiting for him. He left the door open and the star went over and closed it.

"Tex," she pouted prettily, "did you have anything to do with your wife taking my place in your West number?"

"Not a thing, Gogo," Tex assured her truthfully. "The first I heard of it was when Chance came over to make the pictures the other day."

Gogo Starts Plotting

"I feel much better," Gogo sighed. "I was afraid you didn't like me."

Tex was beginning to feed decidedly uncomfortable. He said guardedly: "You're too intelligent a trouper to think I'd let my personal feelings enter into my job, Miss Le Maire."

Gogo didn't know quite what he meant. She pouted again, because she was famous for her cute pout. Men loved it, she had found.

"You wouldn't mind—terribly," Gogo looked up at him appealingly, "if Melvin changed his mind and let me keep the spot, then, darling."

Tex said: "That is entirely up to Mr. Melvin."

"After all," Gogo told him sweetly, "it never would have happened if Miss O'Toole hadn't got all the publicity when she married you. I'm sure you wouldn't want her to be just a stooge. Mel admits she's just a chorus girl and always will be."

Tex's face colored. She's Mrs. Stacy," he said quietly, "and that's all I want her to be."

Gogo laughed a little, tinkling, amused laugh and shook her head.

"You've got it bad, haven't you, darling? But you'll get over it soon. You're going to be a great star, and some day you'll want a woman who can help you. Not an ordinary little thing who can't be anything but a millstone around your neck."

A Visit to Gogo

A moment later Smoky was told by the doorman that Miss Le Maire would like to see her in the star's dressing room. Torchy shook her head darkly: "I knew it! Are you going?"

Smoky had grown a little pale. "I—I guess I'd better," she swallowed nervously. "Maybe she just wants to offer her sympathy or something."

"Oh, sure! Little sweetness and light Le Maire. She's full of the milk of human kindness."

When Smoky knocked on the door with the big star on it, Snooky, Gogo's maid, opened it.

"You may go, Snooky," Miss Le Maire said grandly, and the colored woman went down the hall.

The star did not ask Smoky to sit down. Smoky stood looking at her uncertainly. Gogo ran a powder puff over her nose for a few seconds, then she turned from the mirror and wasted no time in getting to the point.

"I sent for you to tell you not to go in the West number," she said regally. "I won't have my part cut and a chorus girl put in my place. Your husband doesn't want you in it, either. So I guess that makes it unanimous."

3,000 Hear Lewis Address Negro Session

C. I. O. Leader Assails Poll Taxes, Favors Anti-Lynching Bill

C. I. O. President John L. Lewis called upon the Nation's colored population last night to affiliate or to reach a working agreement with Labor's Non-Partisan League as a means of improving its economic status.

Speaking before a gathering of 3,000 in the Labor Department Auditorium at the opening session of the National Negro Congress, Lewis demanded elimination of poll taxes and enactment of Federal anti-lynching legislation.

Lewis accused the Democratic party of breaking its pledge to care for the unemployed as he quoted from the party's 1936 platform.

Stands Against War

He drew loud applause as he demanded that this country stay out of war. "There are people in this country who want to get us into war," he said. "Soon they will have worked up their courage to talk about going to war to save Iceland and Borneo."

Lewis also called for adequate housing and health programs and proposed old-age security payments of at least $60 monthly to individuals and $90 to married couples.

Lewis said colored persons would have to fight "as labor long ago learned" to obtain full civil rights.

"I have publicly urged the President and the Attorney General," he added, "to instruct the Civil Liberties Bureau to bring into the Federal courts of this country a judicial proceeding to attack and strike down the cowardly restraints indicted upon the citizens of the Southern States by poll tax laws. There has been no reply. Nothing has been done."

Presented With Plaque

After his address Lewis was presented with a plaque for his "service to the Negro people." In his speech of acceptance the labor leader declared "I am one American who believes in the equality of opportunity for the Negro people. I do not conceal that view."

A. Philip Randolph, president of the conference, attacked the "hysteria of the Dies Committee, which cites as Communists all minority groups that stage mass demonstrations."

President Roosevelt and the Daily Worker, Communist Party newspaper, published in New York, were among those who extended greetings to the Negro Congress.

The messages were contained in the Congress' program. Mr. Roosevelt's said, in part.

"It gives me pleasure to send greetings once again to another great and representative gathering of Negro citizens at the third National Negro Congress . . .

"Because of confusion and unrest it is more than ever important that the place of a minority group in a democracy not be obscured by ignorance and prejudice . . ."

The Daily Worker's greetings were in the form of a full-page advertisement, which read, in part:

Suspect Calm In Describing Sirkis Killing

'I Wasn't Aimin', I Just Shot,' He Tells Coroner's Jury

With no more emotion than if he were describing a dog fight, Lothan Daniel, colored, 23, yesterday sat before a coroner's jury and told of the slaying of Herman Sirkis in an $18 holdup February 26.

"He started shooting," said Daniel. "I don't know how many times he shot. I turned around and throwed the gun right back across my shoulder—like that—and shot. I wasn't aimin'; I just shot."

Daniel said he and the companion he implicated, John D. Butler, colored, 27, didn't know Sirkis was dead until the next day.

Sirkis, a former Baltimore policeman, was shot in his liquor store at 4824 Dean avenue northeast when he seized a revolver and fired wildly at the retreating bandits.

Judge John P. McMahon set Dean's bond at $50,000 after Assistant District Attorney Stephen Haycock said the youth had confessed 16 other holdups.

Biting Affair

Tennis Player Chews Own Throat in Fall

Hartford, Conn., April 26 (AP).—The case of the tennis player who bit his own throat topped today a list of freak accident claims compiled by Aetna Life Insurance Co. of Hartford.

It happened, so the company said, when the player slipped in lunging after a hard-hit ball. His jaws came together so hard that his bridgework was smashed. Then, convulsively, he swallowed the broken plate, which "bit" him on the way down.

A "self-inflicted hot foot" stood high among other dizzy doings reported by the company. The victim cleaned his spats with an inflammable compound, went for a walk before they dried, and the friction of one spat rubbing against the other set them both on fire. The man's feet and legs were burned before he could snatch off the blazing footgear.
